The following is the opinion of a late ingenious writer respecting the fraternity called Quakers:—"What is familiar and near to us, excites little scrutiny or investigation; but the time may come when a wise Legislature will condescend to enquire, by what medium a whole Society (in both the Old and New World) is made to act and think with uniformity, for upwards of a century; by what policy (without emolument from Government) they have become the only people free from poverty; by what œconomy they have thus prevented beggary and want amongst their Members, whilst the nation groans under the weight of taxes for the poor. They are an industrious, modest, intelligent, and virtuous people, animated with the most beneficial principles. They have a comprehensive charity to all mankind, and deny the mercies of God to none; they publicly aver that an universal liberty is due to all, are against impositions of every kind, though they patiently submit to many themselves, and are perhaps the only people of all mankind, whose practice (as a body) corresponds with their principle."

BIRTH.—A few days since, at his lodgings, George's-Quay, the Lady of Henry Bridgeman, of Kilkishen, county Clare, Esq. of a Son.—On Thursday night, at the seat of his Father, Col. Gough, at Woodstown, near this city, the Lady of the Rev. Thomas Bunbury Gough, of Kilvernow, co. Kilkenny, of a Son.

MARRIED.—At Clareville, Galway, on Wednesday, 4th inst. Lieutenant William Vere Taylor, (only son to the late Captain Taylor, of this city), to the amiable and accomplished Miss Bellew, eldest daughter of John Bellew, Esq. and niece to the late Major-General Bellew, with a handsome fortune.—On Thursday last, at Ross, the Rev. William Hinson, Rector of Coolstuff, to Miss Hewit, only daughter of A. Hewit, Esq.

DIED.—At the Cove of Cork, on Thursday last, Miss Emilia Johnson.—In Waterford, James Sempill, Esq. M. D. one of the Aldermen of this City, and Physician to the Leper Hospital.—Friday last, at Killaderry, near Broadford, co. Clare, aged 71 years, John Bentley, Esq senior Magistrate for said county; a Gentleman of the most humane and honorable principles, deservedly lamented by a numerous and respectable family and acquaintance; his remains were interred on Saturday morning in the family vault at Kilfilly.—At Park Lodge, on Saturday morning, sincerely regretted by her respectable connexions and friends, after a lingering illness, in the bloom of life, Mrs. Wilson, relict of the late Alexander Wilson, Esq. of this City, Merchant, and daughter of John Gabbett, Esq. of Rutland-street. Her remains were interred yesterday morning, in the family vault, at Cahirconlish church. Saturday last, at Corbally, much regretted, Mr. Geo. Hunt, Jun. tallow-chandler.—In Tralee, Mrs. Deane.—A few days ago, in the prime of life, Mr. John Meehan, of Ballymashin, co. Clare.—On Saturday the 7th inst. at her mother's, Mrs. Yeate's, New Sackville-street, Dublin, Mrs. D'Esterre, (wife of N. H. D'Esterre, Esq;) whose tacit resignation to the will of the Almighty, (after a lingering illness for upwards of three years) is the only consolation her truly-afflicted husband can experience, for the loss of a woman just in the prime of life, beautiful in the extreme, and possessed of every amiable quality, a good and virtuous wife, a tender and affectionate mother, a benevolent and kind friend.—Surely Heaven is her retreat.
