

... were ready, and the... report was... resolved into... means, in which... button was conclu...

... into this committee... expressed his wish that... sugars, except that... should be first settled;... posed by the Right... was dropped.

... the chair, and Mr... progress.—Ordered to... and finally to deter... alization duties.

... ed, that on to-morrow... mittee on the heads... laws for regulating of...

... said, that though he... han a common under... objections to it as made... on the table for some... of a bill struck at the... its, and laid a burthen... use that was not equi...

... rered, that these heads... the table during four... Parliament; and, con... it clear and satisfact... mittee, to any gentle... erstanding, that there... the Hon. Gentlemen... standing has found...

... common understanding... uct him through life... ng at any gentlemen's... —They were called to... being agreed to, the... at day.

... and ordered to his... Lieutenant for transf... rred from the commit... bill for the advance... ranting certain duties... nited.

... y being called for and... ng into a committee... l for the better regulat... ed elections for mem... ent.

... Mr J. Dillon in the... when they came to... particular members... Mr. Fitzgibbon said, his former objection to principal Secretary of r gentlemen in office, oper enquiry, that the retary of State was an therefore moved, to cretary of State from e for the trial of con...

would be the highest abuse of Parliamentary faith to precipitate this business, to which the house had agreed to give the most solemn investigation

The house divided, when there appeared.

Ayes 63 | Noes 144

This day Mr. Thomas Lenargan was executed at St. Stephen's green, pursuant to his sentence, for the murder of Thomas O'Flaherty, Esq.—He was attended to the place of execution by detachments of the Volunteers, both foot and horse. He was dressed in a light coloured surtout coat, and his appearance rather mean; and carried a book of prayer and a crucifix in his hands; he seemed much intent upon his devotion.—He persisted in his innocence at the gallows, and was turned off at two; though bred in Trinity College, he died a Roman Catholic.

Authentic Declarations of THOMAS LENARGAN, (executed this day) made last night in the presence of several citizens.

Some respectable gentlemen, paying a visit last night to the unhappy convict, found him perfectly calm, resigned and collected. From the serenity of his demeanor, and ease and correctness of his conversation, he appeared more like a man who was about to settle in the morning some great business of worldly concern, than as one who was on the brink of launching into eternity.

He observed, that his mind was thoroughly fortified to meet his approaching fate—that a consciousness of his innocence enabled him to bear up under that weight which others might deem insupportable—a consciousness, that in this great hour of trial proved to him a tower of strength.—He said, that he had already sealed the declaration of his innocence in the most solemn moment of receiving the sacrament, whose benefits, and dangers of receiving it unworthily, he well knew from his education, and therefore would hardly risk his eternal condemnation by asserting a falsehood, on performing the most sacred and momentous rite of religion.

He asserted in the most positive manner his disbelief, that Mr. O'Flaherty was poisoned at all—declared that the charges alleged against him on the trial were supported by perjury, that hundreds of times he has carried articles of food into the pantry and into the kitchen for that he had acted very frequently in the family in a great measure, at times of eating, like a servant, and this from the circumstance, that Mr. and Mrs. O'Flaherty could not bear to have the common servants of the house attending at their meals, from a great fear of itch that in general covered them.—He declared with the same positiveness, that what was done to the body in the barn, was from no other view but to prevent it from swelling and putrefying, till such time as Sir J. O'Flaherty, who had been sent for, might have arrived. Absolutely denied that he prevented the son from sending express for that gentleman;—also positively averred, no proposal whatever was made by any surgeon or physician to open the body.

He said, that the most false reports had been circulated through the kingdom, of art being used by Mrs. O'Flaherty and others, to induce him to surrender; that all such reports were without any foundation; for that he surrendered voluntarily, and was proud in so doing from a conviction of his innocence. Added, he was certain, that a greyhound then alive, had eaten the turnips put up by the cook, and had licked the wall clean; and asserted the charge of kicking Miss Flaherty, as set forth, to be a gross falsehood.

He entered into several particulars of the reasons of the prosecution, and asserted in general terms, that the principal foundation of it was to deprive Mrs. O'Flaherty of her jointure. He observed he should not make any declarations at the place of his execution; but should hand a paper to the Sheriffs for publication. That he had sent a copy of such paper to a friend for the same purpose, lest any thing should happen to that which he should deliver to the Sheriffs.

He observed, that the public in crediting an infinity of groundless reports, had dealt hardly with him; that he trusted his dying testimony would gain credit with the more num' has been granted his Lordship during life: His Grace the Duke of Leinster succeeds to the ordnance and the regiment of artillery.

A correspondent remarks, on the military promotion of a noble Duke, that it is extremely flattering to the Irish nation, that almost all the nobility and gentry of it are qualified from their education for civil employments, while their warlike disposition, and skill in martial affairs, renders them alike eligible to military ones.

Dublin Castle, 21st Nov. 1781.

My Lord, I have the honor to acquaint you by command of my Lord Lieutenant, for the information of the merchants and traders, that in consequence of an application from his Excellency, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have been pleased to appoint a cutter in addition to the frigates lately ordered to the channel, to be stationed off the harbour of Cork, for the purpose of reconnoitring all ships or vessels of force which may from time to time appear on that part of the coast; and if they are ships or vessels of the enemy, to give immediate information to the commanders or any of his Majesty's ships which may be in the neighbourhood. And his Excellency hopes the early information that will be thus obtained, of the appearance of any of the enemy's vessels of force in the entrance of the channel, will be of service to the trade of this city, and kingdom in general.

I have the honor to be, &c.

To the Lord Mayor, WM. EDEN.

It is confidently affirmed by folks who pretend to be in the secret, that his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and his Secretary are very much inclined that a modification of Poyning's Law should take place; but not having liberty as yet to declare decisively on the subject, they have proposed to Mr. Yelverton, the gentleman who has promised to bring this measure forward, that if he will postpone it until after the Christmas recess, they will use their utmost endeavours to obtain permission from the other side to let it pass.

Some time before the meeting of Parliament it was officially signified to the R. Hon. Mr. Flood, that his conduct the last session of Parliament had given very great dissatisfaction to his Majesty's ministers in England, and that it was expected, a gentleman who held so lucrative a sinecure under the crown, should in future take a decided part with Administration on every question if he meant to continue favour; to this Mr. Flood made no answer but, Sir, I am your most humble servant, and turned on his heel.

Mr. Yelverton, on Friday, in the House of Commons, when he made his motion for a stamp-duty of five pounds on any paper or parchment which contained the admission of a Barrister, said, that he wished, from the proposed scheme, of which this was a part, that a fraud might accrue to increase the salaries of the Judges, which were so pitiful, that no gentleman in any practice, or of abilities at the bar, would accept of their seats. The whole salary and emolument of a Judge, including circuity, if he was able to attend it, did not exceed £1,300, a sum miserably inadequate to the dignity of such an office.

Extract of a letter from John... We are un... that accounts... melancholy de... in the... from Mrs... differ to... endure Ved... y lived, and... gear of 1564... where the one... lastly into his... anger, no pers... hinder him, he... ed th... Don... the h... would Porz... man upon the court of Q...

Same night suddenly, i Widow Reegan.

Cork, Nov. 23. Late William Taylor fell into long quay and was unfortun

L I M E R I

At a Meeting of the Governors of the Industry, 21st of November, 1781.

The Hon. and Rev. Dean Crockett in the Chair. The Committee reported that they had on the 6th inst. examined the accounts and vouchers of Lant Hill, Esq; Treasurer, by which it appeared that since passing his accounts, to the 18th Sept. 1780, he was from the same day to the 18th Sept. 1781.

Debtor to the Charity, £937 0 11 h. Creditor to Ditto 755 5 10

By which a Balance remained } due from Lant Hill, Esq; on } 181 15 1 h } said 18th of September 1781, of }

Resolved, That said accounts are approved and confirmed.

Resolved, That the Thanks of the Corporation be given to Lant Hill, Esq; and that he be requested to undertake the office of Treasurer for the present year, which he has continued to discharge with so much advantage to the charity.

Resolved, That it appears 51,401 Persons have been fed in the House, within said before-mentioned period, at the Expence of 411. 18s. 7d. f. which is less than two Pence for each Person.

Resolved, That the present Number in the House, are 139.

Whereas the Steward has returned several Persons in Arrear, for Work done by the Poor of the House.

Resolved, That the Treasurer shall apply forthwith to said persons to pay all said Arrears.

Resolved, That the above State of the Charity be published.

DIED. Last Thursday Mrs. Mary Parker, relict of Thomas Parker, Esq; late of New-town, Co. Tipperary; a lady of the most amiable disposition, a tender Mother and a sincere Friend; her family are inconsolable for her loss, which is also sincerely lamented by her acquaintances.

NO ADVANCE WHATSOEVER.

Notwithstanding all the CAPITAL PRIZES are in the Wheel, Messrs. Benson, Watson, Flin and Crowe, acquaints Adventurers that notwithstanding the very great Degree of Pre-eminence and confessed Supremacy of Advances and Security in the Policies issued by Messrs. Beatty, Whitehouse, Magge and Burton, evoked by the extraordinary rapid Demand for them in all Parts of the Kingdom, they are determined to sell the few Numbers now remaining without the smallest Advance in the Price, WARRANTED UNDRAWN therefore Adventurers who wish not to be disappointed are requested to be immediate in their Application.

Said WATSON, informs such Persons as bought Tickets at his Shop opposite the Parade, that they may be now Examined Gratis. He is making out a Complete Numerical List of Blanks and Prizes, and will Examine at One Penny per Number. POLICIES Warranted Undrawn to be Sold by him.

WALKER'S Hibernian Magazine.

EXSHAW'S

Gentleman's and London Magazine

For October 1781.—And the Monthly REVIEW for September, price 1s. 1d.

About Five Hundred Pounds,

To be LENT on a Good MORTGAGE.

Application to be made to PAT. MAHON Esq; Treasurer to the ANNUITY SOCIETY.

Such Gentlemen as have Government Debts to dispose of, will meet a Ratable Purchase by applying as above. This Advertisement be Continued 4 Posts. Nov. 26. 81.

TABLE BEER.

BREWED purposely for House Keepers

Private Families, at 8s. 6d. per Bar.

4-4d. Half Barrels, to be had conly

Mr. ROSE'S BREWERY, N

BY A CAPTAIN IN THE REGIMENT OF THE

REGIMENT OF THE

REGIMENT OF THE

REGIMENT OF THE

REGIMENT OF THE