

have one-third of all the property he could raise belonging to the Royal George." He in consequence brought up nine brass guns, and a few iron ones, and took to the value of near 1000l. the whole being estimated on a fair valuation, at 3000l. but it is reported they were so much under-rated, that he did not receive more than 400l. out of which his expences came to the oar-half. The could season approaching, Mr. Spalding left Portsmouth last October, with a promise that he would return in the winter months, and resume his avocation. The treatment, however, he received from these Boarders, not being of the most liberal kind, and another offer presenting itself of infinitely more emolument, he of course readily embraced the latter. He was sent for from Edinburgh by the Underwriters of the Belgio-Imperial East Indiaman, which was wrecked some time ago in Dublin Bay, onward bound from Liverpool, and not a soul saved. Their agreement with him is truly liberal indeed! The cargo was valued at near 150,000l. of which there is 30,000l. in silver and lead. He is to have one-fifth of the silver and lead, and one half of the rest of the cargo; and although he should not recover an article, they are to defray all his expences, from the day he left Edinburgh to the day he returns. As she lies in ten fathom water, two leagues from the shore, and not in quick-sands with her mast above water at ebb, there is the greatest probability of this useful member of society being nobly repaid for his ingenuity and spirit.

He is now in Ireland, and if he soon accomplishes his business there, he is to set out for Gibraltar, strongly recommended by Com. Elliot to the valiant Governor of that name, who three are above 400 brass guns, which were sunk in the Bay on the glorious 13th of September, in the Spanish gun-boats, each of which, even at the price of old metal, is worth upwards of 200l.

Mr. Spalding being down, one very clear day, alongside the Royal George, perceived every object as distinctly as above water, and beheld one of the most tremendous and shocking spectacles that the human mind can form! Great numbers of the dead bodies in various attitudes some clung to the carriages of the gongs, others with the carriages above them, &c. and when it is recollect what vintages they must have in that state of putrefaction, no imagination can paint it without the utmost horror! But what sensations must he have felt, when viewing it in reality!

What a disgrace to the policy of this country that a Gentleman, who has already proved his abilities in recovering so many of the guns and stores of the Royal George, should not meet with the utmost liberality; the more especially, when he has been heard to declare, that he could bring up the most, if not all, her guns and stores, and perhaps get even the ship herself raised this summer; or if that were found totally impracticable, he could blow her up with gun-powder; by which means the most of her timbers and remaining stores would float on the surface.

Igton rode in the carriage with Earl of Temple, both full dressed; the former decorated with the green ribbon, badge of the order of the Thistle, of which his Excellency is a Knight Companion.

Dublin Castle, June 5. 1783.

Yesterday, being the anniversary of His Majesty's birth-day, the flag was displayed on Bedford tower, the great gun at the salutary battery in his Majesty's park the Phoenix were fired three rounds, and answer by volleys from the regiments in garrison, which were drawn out in the Royal Square at the barracks: At noon there was a very numerous assembly of the nobility and other persons of distinction, of both sexes, at the Castle, who appeared in great splendour to compliment his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, before whom an excellent Ode, set to music, was performed. In the evening a play was given by his Lordship to the Ladies; and at night there were bonfires, illuminations, and all other demonstration of joy throughout this city.

We have the pleasure from good authority to assure our readers, that the speech lately inserted in the English newspapers as that spoken by a New-York Delegate in Congress at Philadelphia, which concluded with a motion that a duty of 7½ per cent. be laid on all European and Asiatic manufactures, is a piece of intelligence manufactured in London, without any other authority than the wishes of a few interested persons, for the purpose of making a monopoly of the American commerce in the first instance, or for the more sinister design of rekindling the expiring embers of enmity between these kingdoms and America. By the date quoted, this speech appears to have been delivered 15 days before the Congress had any official account of the peace.

Yesterday after the levee was over, his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant was entertained at dinner by Earl Temple, at the lodge in the Phoenix Park.

The dissolution of our Parliament, we are confidently assured, will take place the first week of next month, and writs be immediately issued for calling a new Parliament to meet the 14th of October next.

We hear from London, that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has, for a second time been refused permission to visit this kingdom.

So great is the esteem and veneration of the people for their daring Volunteer army, that every class of them vie with each other in testifying their attachment. The different turnpikes on the Carlow and other roads were thrown open for every Volunteer, either on horse, or in carriage, coming to, or going from the late review; nor could the keepers be prevailed on to take their usual fees.

Sunday evening the Irish Volunteer, Peter Dillon, master, sailed from Larne with passengers for Philadelphia.
