

Mr. Brest said the application was, in his opinion, very ill timed, as it was made on the very eve of the prorogation of Parliament, when scarcely a sufficient number of Members could be collected to make a House; but thought therefore that the business ought to be postponed to another Session, when it might undergo a thorough investigation.

Sir Adam Ferguson said the business had been mentioned, and a Committee appointed ten days ago, to enquire into it; so that no gentleman could be said to be taken by surprise on the eve of a prorogation. As to the idea of postponing the relief to another Session, it must shock the feelings of every man, who knew that the distresses of these unfortunate Officers were such, that if relief was deferred till the next Session, it might be withheld for ever; for if it did not come soon it would come too late.

The Marquis of Graham was for prompt relief, because the Officers, whose case was before the House, were in such a state, that they must absolutely starve, if they did not immediately get relief. He then read some papers to prove that the two Manoverian regiments mentioned by the Hon. General, were not in the same predicament with the Swiss regiment, to which these Officers belong.

General Conway gave his countenance to the Motion, because the Officers who were the objects of it, had, under the faith of Great Britain, engaged to enlist their respective quotas of men; for which they had been punished by the confiscation of their property, and perpetual banishment of their persons; the justice, therefore, and humanity of this country were so deeply interested, in the case of those unfortunate men, that he hoped the Motion would meet with no opposition.

Mr. Frazer said he was confirmed in what the Right Hon. Commander in Chief had said, from two considerations not yet mentioned. The first was, that the East India Company, as subjects, could not levy troops abroad, and embark them during a war, without the knowledge of Government. The corps in question when raised, could not pass through the territories of several circles in Germany, and other Sovereign States, to be embarked without the countenance and protection of his Majesty's Ministers in those parts through which they must pass. The Address, therefore, had his hearty assent.—Agreed to.

DUBLIN, July 22.

The order for the dissolution of the present Parliament came over last week; owing to some official mistake an omission was made of the necessary and indispensable order for the summoning of a new Parliament.

Galway, July 17. Last Tuesday evening, the Castlebar Volunteers, commanded by Col. Patrick R. McDonnell, marched in hereto be reviewed in conjunction with the other corps mentioned in our last.—The different Corps then in town—drew up and received them with presented Arms, &c.—This excellent Corps and their spirited Commander deserve every commendation for their exertions on this as on every other occasion, having made a forced march here in order to join their Brother Volunteers at our Review, notwithstanding the endeavours of some lovers of division to prevent them. May other Corps imitate the noble example—and Ireland long glory in its Unanimity and Freedom.

LIMERICK.

Today the Loyal Limerick Volunteers, and Limerick Independents, marched to Annacotty, where they were met by the Castle Council and Killaloe Rangers, when the whole went thro' the plan of the ensuing Review.
