

For the noes, Sir H. Cavendish and Mr. St. George

Thursday October 16.

Mr. Grattan moved, That a humble address be presented to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, praying him to represent to his Majesty the humble request of that House, that his Majesty would be graciously pleased to make such provision for the children of the late Chief Baron Burch, as his Majesty shall think proper; for his integrity and abilities in the seat of justice, and the services he has rendered this country.—Carried unanimously.

This day, at three o'Clock in the afternoon, the two Houses of Parliament presented the Addresses at the Castle, after which they adjourned till Tuesday se'night.

LIMERICK.

Last Tuesday six transports with the 11th and 32d regiments of foot on board sailed from Cork harbour for Gibraltar.

At the final close of the poll for the Co. of Galway the 16th inst. (being the 52d day) the numbers were as follows:

For Rt. Hon. Dennis Daly,	558
W. P. K. Trench, Esq;	558
Edmund Kirwan, Esq;	450
Richard Martin, Esq;	383

Mr Henry Bowen, of this City, is appointed Supervisor of Hearths for the Co. of Kerry, and not for the County of Clare, as mentioned in a former paper.

TO THE PRINTER.

Being on a Survey near Newport, I met with your Paper of the 13th Inst. wherein it was mentioned in an Advertisement, that a (scurrilous) dispute about Flood-Gates, &c. would be renewed again. As such contents does not tend in any respect to the good of the Public, in order to put an end to them, I think it proper to propose the following question to the Competitors, &c. for speech is cheap to every person, performance but to few.

New-Ross, Oct. 17. I am, &c. F. P.
Sailing N. W. in a current at the rate of 7 knots an hour, I saw a small Island upon the weather-beam, (wind Easterly) distance 20 miles by computation; continuing our course 2½ miles, the Island was 3 points, and at the end of 6 hours it was 7 points abaft the Beam. Required the direction and velocity of the Current.

Died, Last night, much regretted, Mrs. Hogan, wife to Mr. Peter Hogan, Woolen-Draper.

to other matters you are pleased to take notice of, I cannot appropriate to myself more, than my share, and it may be not unreasonable to remind you that "the safety of individuals" is most effectually secured by that alacrity and spirit with which every good Citizen, in his peculiar department assits in supporting the Police of the City; you Gentlemen, cannot but have experienced this; most, if not all of you have given repeated proofs of it, and persevere in giving the most laudable attention to it: Then as to "the relief of the Poor" it must not be forgotten, that very many of this City with a very few Gentlemen of the Country contributed cheerfully and liberally to the importation of Corn, which most materially alleviated the misery of the Poor, and protected in some measure the public at large from gross frauds, and probably from the consequence of Rapine. I shall only add, that the Extraordinary and voluntary effusions of affection I have been lately honour'd with, from those who cannot be supposed to be actuated by any but the most generous motives, will leave an indelible impression on my mind, and attach me by every Honourable Tie, to my present Office, while I can serve the City in it as I wish.

I have the Honour to be GENTLEMEN, Your devoted, much obliged, and very Humble Servant, GEORGE SMYTH.
