There have been frequent boards of ordnance held this week, for the distribution of the artillery going to Ireland. A letter from Gibraltar says, that General Elliot has nearly completed the works round the fortifications, which are now judged impregnable. The men who have been at work on the fortifications will be employed in building houses in the room of those knocked down during the siege, as a number of families are arrived, and there are not houses sufficient for them to reside in.

Some private letters from Paris, received yesterday, speak of the situation of the French merchants in a very serious light. France was hardly ever in a more alarming bankrupt situation. Could the Spaniards, by any extraordinary stroke of policy, be detached, and the interest of the house of Bourbon now separated (for which there was never a more favourable opportunity) the French monarchy would receive a blow from which it would hardly ever be able to recover. It happens unluckily that the countries to whose interest France's destruction would be particularly advantageous, are in no condition at this time even to attempt such a measure. The French do not complain openly, but the American connections have ruined all their trading people; and unless the Spaniards open their treasury to relieve their distresses, the government and nation must of necessity become bankrupt; for the Americans are in no condition to pay their debts, and the Dutch, hitherto looked upon as a rich and thriving nation, after only a two years war, find themselves in a situation more critical than any that has occurred for a century and a half. The French paper credit is so bad in the North, that their agents meet with the greatest difficulties in procuring stores for their dock-yards; this last is a most lucky circumstance for Great-Britain, whose navy is still rising to a greater height of power and respectability, while that of her rival will of necessity dwindle.

A letter from Lisbon, by a ship arrived in the river, says, that their fears about the earthquake are now subsided, as they have felt no more of it since two or three small shocks some time ago, which did no material damage; but the late stormy weather has done a great deal, not only on shore but at sea; for along the coasts have been seen pieces of wrecks, and some dead bodies, floating upon the surface of the water.

Thursday morning were found in the trunk of a hollow tree, by a man belonging to a cow-keeper at Kingland Road, in one of his master's fields, the bodies, or rather the remains, of a woman and male-child, with their bowels out, and the skin and flesh entirely dry. By all appearance, it is evident they must have remained there a considerable time.

In spite of all the attention of the Emperor to the port of Trieste, trade is so low a state here, that many merchants and mechanics have left the place within the last six months, and others are preparing to follow.

The inhabitants of the devoted city of Geneva, live in the most woful and uncomfortable state imaginable; in conversation even they are obliged to be strictly on their guard, lest they should be given to their military Governors, who are ready to interpret every thing that passes into an intention of revolution and rebellion.

DUBLIN, Oct. 27. Yesterday at the Commission of Oyer and Terminer, Henry Nugent, and Thomas Nugent were tried, and severally acquitted on a charge of counterfeiting and vending stamps, in order to defraud his Majesty's revenue. It is confidently reported, that Mr. Flood is appointed Provost of Trinity College, Cambridge, a place of very considerable emolument in the gift of the Crown. If this intelligence should prove authentic, all that can be said is, that Ireland is a quick soil for patriots;—it soon vegetates;—arrives to speedy maturity, and alas! hastily perishes.

Extract of a letter from Belfast, Oct. 21. Saturday last the 48th regiment arrived Donaghadee, and marched into this town next night on their way to the southward, daily expect the 21st, 26th, and 27th. It is said the principal part of these regiments be stationed here, in the room of the 16th, which we understand is shortly to be ordered. It is also said that the Invalid command, commanded by Edward Hunt, Esq. will be reduced at same time.

...would be confiscated; and fourthly that people of Ireland would make him ample compensation.

The two Parliaments, both equally the choice of the people, will soon meet very near each other in the same city. Which of the two will best answer the intentions of their constituents, or in other words, be the best representatives of the general virtue, time will shortly discover.

We are sorry to find that some bales of silk and stuffs have been lately returned from America unfolded, their quality not being suited to the markets they were sent to. Among other articles returned, is a number of silk handkerchiefs, made up at 18s. per dozen, some of them went off at 10s. per dozen, a buyer having washed those purchased, found them such wretched ware, that he brought them to the vendue, and exposed them; the consequence was, that not one could afterwards be sold at any price.

Mention is again made that there will certainly be a promotion of three additional judges, but that this measure will not take place till after the Christmas recess.

MARRIED. Last Tuesday at Cork, Major Campbell, to Miss Jane Travers of Brandon. In Galway, Wm. Daly, Esq. to Miss Anne D'Arcy. At the Earl of Arran's, Gardiner's-row, Henry Hatton, Esq. Great-clonard, Co. Wexford, to the Rt. Hon. Lady Anne Gore. Mr. Thomas Henshall, of Skinner-row, to Miss Frances Fetherston, of Ballintobber, Co. Wickmeath.

DIED. Yesterday, at his house in Stephen's-green, in the 74th year of his age, the Right Hon. Joseph Lecron, Earl of Milltown. He is succeeded in the title and large family estate, by his eldest son the Right Hon. Lord Rosborough. Last week, at Garradice, Co. Leitrim, Alex. Percy, Esq. lately at Bath, the relict of the late Richard Dawson of Ardee, Co. Louth Esq. In Newry, Mr. Adam Mastland, merchant. In Armagh, Mr. Samuel Coivan.

Kilkenny, Oct. 25. Thursday was committed to the county gaol, by Francis Flood, Esq. John Brady, otherwise Dredough, and Michael Brady, his brother, both of Rosmore, near Callan, being strongly suspected of having, on the night of Monday last, most inhumanly and barbarously murdered Michael Fitzgibbon, their brother-in-law, by giving him many mortal wounds and cuts on his head and body, with the handle of a pitchfork or some such weapon, and also suspected of having robbed the deceased.

It is with pleasure we hear that the King's letter is arrived for promissory to the Deane of Clonfert Rev. Thomas Pack.

On Monday last, Michael Fitzgerald, for breaching the goal of Carlow, and assisting four others to make their escape, was taken at Graiguecromana, by Captain John Bowers and a party of the Graiguecromana Independents, who safely lodged him in the above goal on Thursday.

On Saturday last Peter M'Daniel, was publicly whipped through this city, pursuant to a sentence of the late Quarter Sessions of the peace for this city, for which, after which he was discharged. And on Monday he was lodged in the County goal, by virtue of a commitment from Richard Ball, Esq. charged on oath with having broken out of an office at Grange, a sheet and coat the property of Eland Messers, Esq.

Waterford, Oct. 24. On Saturday last arrived here, after a passage of 14 days from Rotterdam, the Sloop Mary, of Limerick, Capt. Cilly, and brought over 24 more of the Genevee settlers, all men of the first talents in the watch-making business, who intend immediately to commence a manufactory thereof in this city, until they shall be established in New Geneva. They are expert in making all kinds of watches, equal to those of any country whatever, of which an idea may in some degree be formed, in seeing among them, a boy of 13 years of age, capable of pushing the entire movements of a watch in 15 days. Numbers of their fellow citizens intend immediately to follow them, and they assert there would already have been more than six hundred persons on their way to this kingdom, if the proper dispositions were made to receive them: It is therefore much to be wished that the committee for this necessary establishment should be forwarded with the utmost diligence, and that those Gentlemen who are already arrived, may meet with encouragement, in expectation whereof, the Genevee merchants have laid themselves out to transport their commerce into Ireland.
