Roman Catholic...
Honourable Friend (Sir Boyle Roche) - that the tendency and purport of said message had been greatly misrepresented - that we should all confidently - that the eyes not only of this country, but of all Europe were fixed on our proceedings; he then moved, that Sir Boyle Roche, Bart. have leave to explain his former message, and on the question being put leave was given.
Sir Boyle said, that having heard that it was intended to be moved at that assembly, that the Roman Catholics should be admitted to share in the legislature by a participation of the right of voting for members of Parliament, he was come on the part of Lord Kenmare and other particular friends of the same persuasion, to disavow, on their part, any wish of being concerned in the business of elections; at the same time they desired to return thanks to those Gentlemen who intended to have interested themselves in their behalf; but fully sensible of the favours which had been already bestowed on them by Parliament, their only desire, at this time, was to enjoy them in peace, without seeking in the present distracted state of affairs, to raise jealousies and farther embarrass the nation by asking for new ones.
Right Rev. Earl of Bristol - said he had a paper to submit to the consideration of the Convention, which was of the highest consequence, it respected a class of men whose claims required the most serious attention; men who were deserving of enjoying every privilege in common with the rest of their fellow subjects, he need not mention that it was the Roman Catholics of Ireland, he alluded to; he then moved that the paper be read, which was to the following effect:
At a meeting of the General Committee of the Roman Catholics of Ireland, Sir Patrick Bellew, Bart. in the chair, it was unanimously resolved, That the message relating to us, delivered this morning to the National Convention, was totally unknown to and unauthorized by us.
That we do not so widely differ from the rest of mankind, as, by our own act, to prevent the removal of our shackles.
That we will receive with gratitude every indulgence that may be extended to us by the Legislature, and are thankful to our benevolent countrymen for their generous efforts in our behalf.
Resolved, That Sir Patrick Bellew be requested to present the foregoing resolutions to the Earl of Bristol, as the act of the Roman Catholics of Ireland, and entreat that his Lordship will be pleased to communicate them to the National Convention." Ordered to lie on the table.
It was moved that the paper produced by Sir Boyle Roche, Bart. be printed.
Right Rev. Earl Bristol, also moved that the resolutions, which he had presented should be likewise printed. Ordered accordingly.
Counsellor Morris was of opinion that as these two papers militated against each other, they should be referred to the Select Committee.
Mr. BOUSFIELD said, it was of the greatest consequence that these papers should be taken into consideration. Two millions of people looked up to you for your intervention; The rights of nations, and of every man, were interested. The Roman Catholics were not to be compared to the Capadocians, who prayed for slavery.
Counsellor Morris. The business we have assembled for is of the greatest magnitude; and requires the fullest information that possibly can be had. The Committee of the Munster Delegates had opened a correspondence with some of the most distinguished characters in either Kingdom, for the purpose of getting information on a question that is to settle the constitution of this country, not for a day, but for ages. It was allowed that all the papers necessary on this head were not brought forward, and that though a select Committee was appointed, yet every individual of that assembly, and he hoped they would attend to it, had a right to deliver his sentiments on the report of that Committee. [He was called to order by the Earl of Bristol, who said there was no question before them.] Counsellor Morris then moved, that the Chairman and Secretary of Correspondence, for the province of Ulster, do produce all such papers and information as they have received on the subject of a Parliamentary Reform, and that such papers do lie on the table.
Mr. Newport was against bringing forward any letters, except of consequence. Why overburthen this Convention with papers, if they can throw no new light on the subject?
Mr. Hacket observed, that much time had
