

Every effort is now used to make Mr. Grattan and Mr. Daly, together with other gentlemen to support the propositions—one argument is truly ingenious; they are told the people are dissatisfied at them; the people think them injurious; and then a conclusion is drawn, that Mr. Grattan, Mr. Daly, &c. ought to support the propositions; Why? Because being men of sense, they ought to despise the people—Excellent argument—worthy such able advocates.

How great was the discernment of Mr. Flood, who even upon the first introduction of the propositions, foresaw the destruction which they would bring upon the trade and liberty of this country, a destruction which even the profest friends to Administration, are now obliged to acknowledge; however singular he was in his opposition at that time, the public are now convinced that it was founded in principle, and that the strength of his judgment is not to be borne down by the smallness of the minority. Happy for the people to have a protector of such quickness of perception.

England insisted on a right to legislate externally for all the empire; England made laws which bound the external trade and navigation of this kingdom—Ireland, therefore, was not free. Ireland demanded a relinquishment of this power, and Ireland obtained it. England now wishes to re-assume it. England, therefore, wishes to deprive Ireland of its Freedom.

From the PENNSYLVANIA PACKET.

"A countryman going into a bookfeller's shop, in New-York, enquire for a dollar's worth of capers; to which the bookfeller replied, he had none, but that he would give him a note to a friend of his, that he knew had some; accordingly he wrote to his friend (who was a dancing master) desiring he should let the bearer have a dollar's worth of capers; upon which the dancing master asked him for the money, which he delivering, was then taken into a room, wherein the poor country man was supplied with a number of capers across the floor, which was all he got for his dollar."

It must afford very much pleasure to the public to hear, that Mr. Pery and Mr. Yelverton, are soon to be called up to the House of Peers. The ability, the inflexible integrity, and the great legal knowledge of these gentlemen, will add dignity to that august assembly, and must give an increase of confidence and security to the people in the rectitude of their decisions.

The family of the Fitzgeralds have been resident in Ireland for the space of six hundred and sixteen years, and was ennobled in the year 1180. It hath given to this country a long succession of defenders of its rights, and friends of its people. The present Duke of Leinster has not degenerated from the nobility of his noble ancestors. He possesses the warmest zeal for his country's welfare, that animated so many of his progenitors; and, like them, scorns to bend to the invaders of its privileges. To him the

The spirited efforts of the Northerners likely to be crowned with success the most desirable, in the establishment of the linen markets in Ulster, for the sale of white goods—not a doubt remains of the Belfast people carrying their point, which will be of the most infinite service to that staple trade.—To assist this undertaking, a number of gentlemen have subscribed a very large capital for the formation of a Bank in that place, to assist the operations of trade, and the convenience of the linen sellers.—This stroke was the only wanting, to fix their market upon a basis, which must command establishment.

On Saturday night last the brother of the unfortunate Meaghan (who had been hanged in the morning for robbing the Hon. Mr. Agar) committed a robbery on the Park-road, by stopping a Gentleman, from whom he took upwards of 20 guineas, but being closely pursued, was taken in a house, at Island bridge, from whence he was committed to New Prison.—This incorrigible villain had just stepped out of the House where his brother lay waking when he committed the above robbery!

The condition of a British minister is far from being desirable to a person who wishes to possess the popular esteem. The pressure of an enormous debt, entailed by unproductive and impolitic wars, and every article loaded by his predecessors with taxes, leave him only a choice of difficulties, without a possibility of avoiding new impositions, which must inevitably excite popular discontent and clamour. This appears to be the case with Mr. Pitt, who entered into administration with every advantage of his father's fame, a nation's hopes and wishes, and the most promising talents and established integrity. Notwithstanding all these, and though his measures have been conducted with an openness, candour, and firmness which entitle him to respect, we find that a national clamour has at last been excited against him, and by the last advices from London, great mobs had patrolled the streets, loading the name of the Minister with execrations on account of the Shop Tax, and the Irish Resolutions. To add to the folly and ingratitude of the times Mr. Pitt is unpopular here for being too partial to England, and in the sister kingdom for being the violent and obstinate friend of Ireland, who hath sacrificed the interests of old England at the Irish shrine.

On Tuesday evening last, a house at Barragorone, near Loughrea, was struck by a severe flash of lightning, which consumed the same in a short time, together with several stacks of corn. Two men at work in the house at the time were also struck, one of whom was killed on the spot. The other was dragged out speechless, his life is despaired of. Belfast, June 21. Large quantities of cloth are pouring into our White Linnen Market, from all quarters. The sales are already brisk, and promise a good market.

A number of gentlemen of this town went in a body, a few days ago, to see the canal at present carrying on between Belfast and Loughneagh. They returned with a very high regent and Arthur Vincent, Esqrs. Sheriff, George Smyth, Esq; Recorder, Robert Hallam, Esq; Town Clerk; John Prendergast Smyth, Chamberlain; at the same time the Rt. Hon. Lord Carbery and Dr. Ryan of Newport were admitted Freeman of this City.

The Rev. Wm. Ashe, has obtained a premium from the Dublin Society of Eighteen Pounds Sterl. for a large Plantation of Trees and Oziers, on a Farm he holds from Lord Viscount Courtenay.

The heat of the weather was so great yesterday, the Thermometer stood at 90 degrees. Those who have the care of children, should be very cautious they bathe only in the cool of the morning, and with careful persons to prevent their being drowned.—This morning a promising lad of 15, son to Serjeant Sweetman of the Artillery was drowned at the King's Island, by venturing out of his depths.

Last Friday being the anniversary of St. John's Day, Causey Harrison, Esq; Master, with the Wardens, Secretary and Members of Lodge No. 9, and the other Worshipful Lodges of Free Masons in this City, walked in Procession to the Cathedral Church, where an excellent Sermon, suitable to the occasion, was preached by the Rev. George R. O'Connell.

Died. Last Monday, Miss Evans, daughter to the late Eyre Evans of Milltown, Esq; she was a young Lady of the most gentle manners, the most amiable disposition, which renders her death a severe loss to her family and acquaintance.—On Thursday the 23d of the Month, Miss Gorman, daughter of James Gorman, of Ennis, Esq; in the 14th year of her age, to the inexpressible Anguish and Affliction of her Disconsolate Parents, friends, family and Acquaintance.—Last Saturday, after a few hours illness, most deservedly regretted by all those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, William Gubbins, Esq; a young Gentleman possessed of the finest feelings of friendship and humanity:

"What cause has mortal flesh to boast,
Of transient knowledge, wealth and power!
The summons comes, we give the ghost,
And all are nothing in an hour."
