

Mr. Orde, will not return—his being a British Privy Counsellor, shews how much the Minister wishes to have his advice and assistance, in preparing matters for a new trial of strength on the Irish Propositions.

It was yesterday reported with much confidence in town, that the county Waterford fracas was not likely to end so pleasantly as some could have wished. The poor countryman, who had got to unmerciful a drubbing, and that without the smallest cause of offence, had already sworn examinations against the whole party, for a desperate assault. The trial of this affair will afford no small merriment, and will convince that no rank, however distinguished, can with impunity insult the meanest individual in the land.

Monday being the last day of Term, an Attorney was struck off the roll, for detaining money in hand, the property of his employer.

It is not unworthy of notice, and not a little remarkable, that of the numerous murders with which this kingdom has been lately disgraced, the most of them have been contrived and effected by young villains who have not attained to state of manhood. Mr. Bellew, Dr. Pendolphi, John Brown, and many others, fell sacrifices within a short time to the sanguinary cruelty of diabolical imps, suffered to run up as the weeds of a neglected education, and a pest to the soil which afforded them being.

This morning, at three o'clock, an alarming fire gushed out of an old house in Thomas-street, which by the early and active exertions of Messrs. Maquay, with their excellent fire engine, was prevented from injuring the adjoining butter stores.
