prehenſion of danger.

Early on Wednesday morning the Rt. Hon. the Attorney General alſo reached Caſtlebar, and immediately proceeded to the arrangement of the evidence on behalf of the Crown, being determined to proſecute in ſuch a manner as to ſtretch forth the arm of Juſtice as well to the murderers of M'Donald and Hyppon, as to thoſe who committed the ruffianly aſſault on Mr. Fitzgerald while under the protection of the law.

When the above accounts left Caſtlebar, it was reported, and generally believed, that ſix of the principal evidences on behalf of the Crown had been bought off.

The Caſtlebar commiſſion has more to engage its attention, than merely the murder of Mr. M'Donald, and Mr. Hyppon; the five aſſaſſins who attempted to murder Fitzgerald in priſon, are alſo to be tried. Let his fate be what it may, puniſhment or eſcape, he was under the protection of the laws, and if a common proſtitute can hang a raviſher, why not a criminal hang the felon who attempted to rob juſtice of her legal victim?

It is found upon enquiry, that no ſum of money whatever, on account of the unfortunate Fitzgerald, has paſſed through the hands of the Bankers in this city—Another report made the National Bank the place of depoſit for two thouſand pounds—that is equally falſe and totally void of truth.

We deferred the publication of this paper more than three hours, hoping our expreſs would arrive from Caſtlebar—no intelligence whatever is yet arrived, although 8 o'clock.

LIMERICK.

To the Memory of Miſs MARY MAUNSELL.

WHY fails the tear? Why heaves the mourniful breaſt?
Why is my ſoul with agony oppreſſed?
Is't for the dead?——my anguiſh then is vain,
She lives in glory—free from mortal pain.
Religion ſays—'tis impious to deplore,
Of bliſs divine ſhe has eternal ſtore.
My reaſon too proclaims her happy ſtate,
The great, the brave, the good muſt yield to fate.
For joys ſeraphic change the ills of life
And baniſh thus all momentary ſtrife.
But human frailty will force its way,
Vain is religion, vain is reaſon's ſway.
She's gone, alas! whoſe life no pleaſure knew.
But what her mind from virtuous actions drew,
Then flow my tears and heave my throbbing breaſt!
Let ſacred friendſhip be to all confeſſed,
Now reign triumphant o'er my weeping frame,
I conſecrate to thee the precious ſtream.—
Some latent worth each year diſcloſed to view,
And as her age increas'd her virtues grew;
Adieu dear maid, nor can I ceaſe to mourn,
And with my tears bedew thy ſacred urn.
Till time, deſtructive time has dried their force
But friendſhip's proof againſt its direſt force,
Accept theſe lines, ſole tribute I can give,
Yet I'd not with that thou again ſhould'ſt live;
Oh impious thought—to think of ſuch redreſs,
Two'd make the heav'nly choirs an angel leſs.

June 8, 1786.

Early yeſterday morning, agreeable to the oaths they had taken for the purpoſe, about two hundred and fifty men, ſeveral of them armed, aſſembled at Murroe. They came from Galbally, and whatever may have been their cauſe of complaint, their impudence was very great, to come above fourteen miles from home to diſturb the peace of another county. The high ſheriff and ſeveral [illegible]

[illegible] Tythes and pariſh dues, and they [illegible] to Murroe to tender oaths and to make proſelytes, but it would be great injuſtice to the yeomen of Murroe, if we omitted to ſay they are a very numerous and decent body of men, who did not ſhew the leaſt ſymtom of diſcontent or riot. We are well aſſured the great officers of government, have it in contemplation to lighten the hardſhips of the poor, but they ought to ſhew themſelves deſerving of it, by behaving in a very peaceable manner.

On the above occaſion, the Chief Magiſtrate Sir Chriſtopher Knight, ordered out a ſtrong detachment of the Royal North Britiſh Fuzileers, commanded by Capt. Petrie, who lay in readineſs at Kilnegarrid bridge, and who would have been of the utmoſt ſervice, if the Gallybally ragamuffins had not fled on the firſt approach of the Volunteers.

We are happy to hear, that the Volunteers of this County intend embodying themſelves immediately, in order to preſerve the peace thereof, which has been long diſturbed by theſe miſguided men, called White Boys; a party of whom a few nights ago aſſembled near Charleville, in order to ſwear the inhabitants, when they met with a gentleman of the name of Seaward, whom they uſed in ſuch a cruel manner, that he now lies with little hopes of recovery.

The ſeveral Perſons who purpoſe to be Governors or Governeſſes of the County Infirmary, for the Parliamentary year, which is to commence on the 24th inſtant, are, by Act of Parliament, to pay their Subſcriptions before ſaid day: and the general Quarterly Meetings are to be held on the 26th and 27th inſt. at 12 o'Clock.
