

Yesterday Mr. VIGARS, the young gentleman who had been brought up to this city, on a charge of having headed the insurgents in the county of Kilkenny, walked several times up and down the Castle-yard, in company with the Town-major and Captain of the guard; a soldier followed with a drawn bayonet, all the time.—He has very much the look and appearance of a gentleman, and was dressed in a very elegant manner. He seemed to hold constant conversation with the officers, and smiled several times. The military on duty would not suffer any person to approach any way near them.—His dress, upon the whole, was somewhat peculiar, and he had a bunch of ribbons in each shoe, in the form of a rose, instead of buckles.—From the circumstance of his being permitted to walk about, it is evident that the charges are not very severe against him, or certainly such an indulgence would, by no means, be granted.—It is said, that he rests his whole defence on the oath that was administered to him by the White-Boys, and also his being in danger of his life, if he did not join them.—He does not, in any manner, deny his being along with them, but fully admits the charge upon which he was taken.—It is supposed that nothing whatever can be done to him, except his being imprisoned till the disturbances are over.

The Mr. VIGARS, now a State prisoner at the Castle, is by no means the man of property or consequence, he is represented to be in most of the papers—nor is he any way allied to the gentleman alluded to,—who, in consequence of the idea going abroad, had himself a private audience with a great personage upon the subject.

Should it be a certain fact that the French Monarque intends ceding for ever one of the West India islands to the United States of America, it may be very naturally expected that the colonists will give a valuable consideration in return, which we may suppose to be some tract of territory in the back settlements, as contiguous as possible to Louisiana, an extended space of country belonging to France; or else make a cession of some of the islands that are adjacent to the coasts of the province of New York. Should either be the case, it may prove a thorn in the sides of the Americans upon some future occasion; as in the former predicament the French would be able on some future occasion to annoy them on the Western sides of their territories; and in the latter they might destroy their commerce by having ships of force always ready in the different ports of the islands adjoining to their shores; for notwithstanding the apparent tranquility, and even firm alliance that at present subsists between them, a very trivial and unexpected circumstance might very soon dissolve the union, and kindle up the flames of war.

Common Edmund Meagher, John Guinan, James Heany, William Bourk, William Parke, T. Mullingar, Aug. 26. Last Thursday our assizes ended, when the following persons were tried and found guilty, viz. James Campbell, Edward M'Donald, Michael Gilroy, Hugh Doudal, and Michael Doudal, all for the robbery of Mr. John Brogan, of Cullenbeg as formerly mentioned. They were found guilty on the clearest evidence, by the corroborating testimonies of several witnesses, and by a most respectable Jury, notwithstanding an alibi was attempted to be proved. Several other prisoners were tried for cow-stealing and various thefts, and were acquitted, mostly for want of prosecution.

Cork, Sept: 5. Between 11 and 12 o'Clock on Monday night last, Scofield and M'Auliffe, Postmen, going from this to Mallow, were stopped on Bottle Hill, by five men, who said they came from Capt. Right to swear them, which they did, to call on the Printer of the Cork Chronicle, and desire he would publish, a determination in them to rest satisfied with their rates for the Tythes, and that in future they would not assemble either by night or by day, but remain peaceably in their habitations. For their own sakes it were to be wished they would adhere to this resolution, and that the rest of their brethren would follow them in it, and not be hastening to the fatal tree, where we fear many of them will arrive, if they do not desist from their horrid practices.

Thursday night a sort of encampment of White Boys, took place on the large field near Blarney, (in which the man was executed for murder last Assizes.)—several thousands met, and sent out detachments into the town of Blarney, and other friendly quarters.—Same night a gallows was erected on the lands of Dunbullog, in the North Liberties, by one of the detachments.

Last week two Clergymen of the Church of Rome, belonging to this town, hearing a gallows was erected by some of the White Boys,
