

we cannot say we much regret their having the present specimen of its inconveniences, as it may be the means hereafter, from their own dear-bought knowledge of such evils, to pay a more sacred regard to the duties incumbent on the subjects of other communities.

Mr. Ed. Burke, made his first appearance in public life at the time of the repeal of the Stamp Act in the year 1766. He supported that measure with great zeal and uncommon abilities, and being then a young member, he attracted the attention of the House in a most particular and forcible manner.—His political situation proceeded from his connection with the Marquis of Rockingham, who had been at that period First Lord of the Treasury. His powers of persuasion are almost irresistible, joined to the most solid and weighty arguments, and enforced in a manner almost peculiar to himself. His sources of knowledge are inexhaustible, and his materials drawn forth with the profoundest and most accurate judgment. His mind abounds with a luxuriance of imagery, clothed in language of the most delicate and elegant nature. His details are always correct, interesting, and important. His facts are seldom assumed and when they are, he ingeniously sounds them on certain current opinions, perhaps controverted, but known however to exist.—In short, few men in these kingdoms are equal to him, but none excel him in great and splendid abilities.

Not a doubt remains, but an adjustment of the commerce of the two kingdoms will be brought forward, early next session. Those who are, or affect to be in the secret, look upon the matter as a moral certainty, since the arrival of the Chief Commissioner from London. We cannot think that any minister, however presumptuous, would bring forward propositions conceived in the spirit of Mr. Pitt's, that were exploded the session before last—propositions, subversive of the constitution and trade of Ireland—but a reciprocal adjustment is to be wished for by every person who has at heart the welfare of Ireland—at present there is a visible inequality, to the prejudice of this kingdom. The markets and manufacturers of England are protected, whilst our raw materials and market lies at their mercy!

COUNTRY NEWS.

Cork, Oct. 12. A few nights ago, as Mr. Henry O'Hea, of Rockfavage, was returning to his own house from Clonakitty, about the hour of eleven o'clock, he was attacked by a number of men, who knocked him off his horse, trampled on him and inhumanly beat him, calling out to murder him, for that it was the Rev. Mr. Townsend. On Mr. O'Hea's making himself known, they remounted him, apologizing for mistaking him for Mr. Townsend. Mr. Townsend's activity as a Magistrate, seems to have been the cause of this daring outrage.

Yesterday in the City Court came on the trial of Samuel Sullivan, otherwise Sammy Sam, for burglary, and robbery, to a large amount in March last on Giles Powell, Esq; at Sunday's Well, when a most respectable jury brought him in guilty, and he received sentence of death accordingly.

Kilkenny, Oct. 14. Yesterday was committed to the county gaol, by Richard Cox, Esq; Edward Mandeville, of Euface Land, in the county Tipperary, charged on the oath of William Stacpole, parish clerk of Whitechurch, in the county Kilkenny, with having on Sunday the 13th of August last, (in company with divers other riotous and disorderly persons, of whom he was principal) seized said Stacpole by the collar, tearing his shirt, and dragging him by the hair and ears in a violent manner, threatening to cut off his ears if he did not swear the right boys oath, which he in this county, to be imprisoned three months.—Same Peter Dawly, otherwise Daly, found guilty on the Act, of tendering and imposing an unlawful oath, to be imprisoned three months more, and publicly whipped through the town of Killarney on Saturday, 28th of October, inst.—Same Peter Dawly, otherwise Daly, found guilty, on same Act, of an unlawful assembly, and of wearing a particular dress or uniform, and assuming a certain name or denomination, not usually worn and assumed by his Majesty's subjects, to be imprisoned three months more, and publicly whipped through the town of Tralee, on Saturday the 18th November next; said several whippings to be between the hours of 12 and 2 in the afternoon of said days. Same Peter Dawly, found guilty, on same Act, of an unlawful assembly, to be confined three months more.—James Moriarty found guilty of assaulting Thomas Marshall, a Revenue Officer, to be imprisoned four months, and fined 10l.

Saturday night a fire broke out in the house of one John Grady in this town, but by the timely assistance of the inhabitants and a party of the 21st regiment, it was got under, without doing any other mischief than damaging a part of said house.

We are happy in this opportunity of giving testimony to the exemplary good conduct and sobriety of the troops quartered here, under the command of Captain Brodie of the 21st regiment,—a conduct we have seldom seen equalled—never surpassed.

'TIS sadness all, and gen'ral gloom!
Each face is now deep clad in Woe,

For D— to the silent tomb
Has sunk alas! alas! lies low—

As bright as Phæbus' noon-tide-Beam,
Which cheers and makes all Nature gay,

As Morn serene fair D— came
And chas'd all anxious thoughts away.

The God of Love around her play'd,
The Graces in each feature shone,

Admiring Youths ador'd the Maid,
Each wish'd the lovely Fair his own,

But vain their Hopes, she was decreed
To soothe a Soul inu'd to arms,

Reward of many a glorious deed
In war's dread rage, were D—'s charms.
