the beginning of that infliration to the prefent, should be laid before the House, in order to fee whether any retrenchments could be made, to alleviate the burden laid on the house-keepers, for, he faid, it was not only the tax laid on houses that produced a revenue for its fup port, but that there were allo other modes of railing money for the tame purpole.

Mr. Hattley moved, that the further confidetation of the bill be pollponed till Saturday next, in order that the citizens might have time to take the intended amendments into proper confideration.

The Attorney General declared that the whole was to obvious and plain as not to require any delay. The amendments went but to the appointment of two Infoellors to each divition, to the discharging of a part of the petty Constables, the relieving of the gold and filver-fmiths, and fome other circumflances that required no great length of time for conhderation,

The House retolved itself into a Committee on the bill for granting a compensation to the clergy for the tithes due in 1787, and for amending the act relative to 1786,

The Provoit declared, that he should endeayour to explain whatever double might ar le in any Gentleman's breatt respecting the construction of the prefent bil, in the best and most fatisfactory manner he possibly could; he faid that there were alterations with respect to including of counties of cities, also with regard to giving the prior claim to the clergy for their dues before the landlord, the necessity of which must be very obvious, when it is confidered that by the artifices of the middle-men the peafantry had been infligated to their late rilings and infurrections; and if the ecclefiaftic should ferze for five shillings, the landlord would put in perhaps a fictitious claim for five pounds, and thus the intent of the bill, if not properly guarded in this manner, would be entirely descated. That by this bill all diffidence in appealing to Ecclefialtic Courts would be entirely done away as no tithe for turf or furze, or any other claim not allowed by law. could possibly be made; and where, through a spirit of combination no proper valuation of tithes could be made on the lands in different parishes, the charge was to be made from an average rate of the preceding three years. He mentioned, that to his own knowledge, the most moderate charges of tithe had been made in the fix parithes in the diocefe of Cork, nor had there been the finallest addition in the rates thefe thirty years past, notwithstanding the depreciated value of money, and the increafed rates of every article and necessary of life. He then read over the different average rates of tithes on wheat, barley, oats, flax, meadow ground, &c. in the different dioceles of the province of Munster, and declared that he had received his information from the Bishops of the same, and the Vicar General, as also from several of the most respectable perfons in that part of the country, which evidences were diametrically opposite to those received by his Hon. Friend (Mr. Grattan) -The fufferings and ill treatment of leveral of the clergy, whose characters for true christian charity and univerfal benevolence were admitted by all that had the piculure of being acquainted with them, were shocking. enumerated fome of the outrages and violences that had been committed by the deluded multrinde.

Yesterday, Charles Dampley was tried for the murder of Margaret Tighe and James Gardoner, who lavely lived with his Grace the Archbultop of Dublin, the trial held for upwards of nine hours, when the jury brought in a verdict not Guilly.

Until within these two lest wars, it has been commonly observed, that where there was a foark of liberty exilling in the government of any State, France would sifque every thing rather than not extraguish it. While the praceeded on this lyftem, her mensiony flourished. But when the once began to change her conduct, and to support the advicties for freedom in America and Holland, the has found that her own people begin to think that the liberty which they supported on the behalf of foreigners might as well fait the climate of Thouloufe, Boardesux or Peris, at their of Button or Amlerdam. The effect of those speculations feems to be approaching with no tardy pace;

Lord D --- has be n more successful in the course of a thort time than has been remembered. His Lordth p, in one night, ftripped the Pharean bank, and at hazard 4000 guineas.
