The FLASH made by the British officers in the Russian service, in respect to Paul Jones, is over. Their remonstrance produced no effect, and at the instance of Admiral Count Greig, they have resumed their stations. There are no British officers serving as volunteers in either of the Imperial armies, nor is it imagined there will be a decisive stroke between them and the Turks during the present campaign.

We are informed that Earl Nugent is arranging his works, and that a superb edition is to come out in winter, both of his poetry and prose, together with his remarkable speeches in the English Parliament, during the latter years of Sir Robert Walpole's being in power; the most of which had been taken down, and published by Doctor Johnson at the time, for Cave's magazine.

A NECDOTE.

A FRENCH gentleman who had lodged all his money in the hands of a banker some little time before he stopped payment, had the good fortune to save it by a droll and lucky accident.—While he was standing one day at a fruit shop near the Exchange, a gentleman entered, and ordered a desert of fruit of various kinds for his dinner, to the amount of five or six pounds. The Parisian at his departure enquired what great Duke or Lord that was, who had been so profuse in the simple article of fruit; he was answered, that it was Mr. F. the banker. Oh! oh! you say dat, returned the astonished foreigner; begar, den me go dis minute and take my money from him, or he will eat it all up. He drew out his money immediately, and Mr. F. stopped payment two days after.

Kilkenny, August 2. Saturday ended the assizes of Carlow, at which Patrick Kavanagh, found guilty of a fraud, in collecting the public tax without any authority, was ordered to stand in the pillory three several times, and to be imprisoned two months; Elizabeth Purcell, found guilty of a felony, to the value of sixpence, to be imprisoned three months.

Tuesday night, the prisoners confined in the county gaol, were discovered in attempting to make their escape, through the sewer of the prison.—The waler had them properly

Last Tuesday a poor woman, with a child in her arms, fell down about a mile from this city, and by her endeavours to save the child from harm, unfortunately fractured her own leg; she was immediately received into the County Hospital, where every necessary assistance was given her.—The numerous accidents that have lately occurred, and the timely relief afforded them in the County Limerick Hospital, clearly evince the great utility of that Charity, and calls loudly upon the benevolent and humane to lend it every aid in their power: Dr. Piercy requests his friends and the friends to humanity will send a supply of linen to the Hospital, that article being much wanted.

Hint to gardeners.—A gentleman has lately discovered, that adding one pint of brine, (either of pickled meat or herrings) to three pints of pond water, and poured with a watering pot on gravel walks, will not only destroy all worms, grass, and mosses, but also effectually prevent the return of any more, by a continuance of the sprinkling in the beginning of the season. This will be found a most useful hint to gentlemen, in the beautifying the walks of their gardens.

Died. Yesterday in Broad-street, much regretted, Miss Eliza Bourke.
