our placetty, 25 matter of eight handkerchiefs and a prayer book-deducted from the pockets of the company in court.

Talents to eminent could not remain long enncealed; -and a perion who caught his hand in familiarity with his packet-thought proper to introduce him to the notice of Judge Toler, who ordered the young gentleman's admillion to the Front Box, vulgarly called the DOCK.

Examinations were immediately lodged, and the indictment found by the grand jury, who were then fitting. The fellow was immedistely brought on his trial-found guilty of depositly fleating a prayer-book - and condemned to a found flagellation and three months imprisonment,-This was quick work.

The fame day, and in the fame place, a fellow came to profecute a woman for flealing an horse and a mule, for which she had been fome time confined ;-but before he proceeded to evidence, he consulted the learned Judge, how far he was warrantable in profecuting the woman, who was his wife. The ludge, hocked at this discovery, examined the fellow more closely; and in the course of his interrogations, discovered that the fellow had entered in a malicious conspiracy against the poor woman's life ;-he therefore ordered her to be discharged, and her husband to be committed in her place, to take his trial for malicious confpiracy.
