

His Majesty was so far recovered as to talk rationally, and converse cheerfully—may be expressed himself sensible of his late situation. The Physicians still having a doubt of the perfect re-establishment of his faculties—merely for experiment—asked him if he knew that gentleman, pointing to one of those in waiting—the King shrewdly suspected the tendency of the question, and archly replied, that he not only knew him, but that his name might admit of a pun—for he was Mr. GOOD MANNERS—his gave high satisfaction to all, as Mr. MANNERS had been incessant in his attendance on the Royal Person during the whole of his indisposition.

Every heart dilates with joy at the pleasing news which has diffused cheerfulness through the environs of Windsor Castle.

The packets received last Wednesday night, acquaint the public, that on Saturday morning last, our most gracious Sovereign was considerably better—that his delirium had entirely ceased—and that he had conversed with his physicians in so rational a manner, as to afford them grounds to believe, that his fever had experienced a crisis, and hopes are entertained that the ardent wishes of an affectionate people may be gratified, by his speedy recovery and re-establishment of health.

By a gentleman who arrived here last Wednesday from London, we learn, that the Right Hon. Charles Fox, was expected to arrive in that capital on Thursday.

From the same quarter we are assured, that there is not the least foundation for the reports so confidently propagated of late, that a coolness existed between his R. H. the Prince of Wales and Mr. Fox, but that on the contrary a reciprocal attachment, as great as can possibly exist between persons in their respective and relative situations, remains unbroken to this hour.

The Parliament of Great Britain meet this day, only to adjourn, so that his Majesty's Ministers seem to have strong confidence on the change the disorder has taken, and that so much for the better.

His Excellency the Marquis of Buckingham has made every arrangement for his retirement from the government of this Kingdom. He has intimated to his domestics, that he shall not continue here longer than a month at farthest.

The Marchioness of Buckingham and her attendants, only wait for the arrival of the night, to convey them to England. Her Ladyship proposes to lie-in at Slowe, in preference to London.

PRAYER appointed by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland, to be used on Livery days before the Litany, and on other days immediately before the Prayer for all conditions of men, in all Collegiate, Collegiate, and Parochial Churches, Chapels within the Kingdom of Ireland, and in his Majesty's present indisposition.

Our Father of Mercies, and God of all Comfort, our only help in time of need; We fly to thee for succour in behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King, and of the people committed to his care; beseeching thee to restore to his former health, and to prolong his life on earth, that he may live to thee, and an instrument of thy glory, by continuing to serve thee faithfully in piety and wisdom, to maintain amongst us the blessings of religion, civil liberty, and public peace. Pardonably, O Lord, extend thy mercies to Queen, the Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and comfort and support them in their heavy affliction. And we beseech thee, that we thy servants, duly sensible of manifold blessings, which thou hast extended to us under his mild Government, may by good time be enabled to give thanks to thee in thy holy place, for having restored our gracious Sovereign to the ardent prayers of thy people; grant this, O Lord, for Jesus sake, our only Mediator and Advocate.

Edles, one of the land-waiters on the Embury-quay, is, we hear, appointed Sheriff of Trim, in the room of Mr. Verelstam; and is to be succeeded as land-waiter by young Mr. Talbot, second son of the Col. Talbot, of Malahide.

Should it please divine Providence, from the ardent and unceasing prayers of the people of this Kingdom, to raise their beloved Sovereign from his bed of sickness, and prolong his life, never will gratitude be more lively, or affection more sincere and animated. The welfare, and general prosperity of the

Had the day of M'Cormick's execution, who suffered on Saturday last, being a little more extended, death, most probably, would have disappointed the hangman, as the poor wretch was lying under a fever, for several days previous to his execution. However atrocious the crime, (that of a servant robbing his master) for which this unfortunate man suffered, still must an emotion of pity be excited in the breast of humanity, on the reflection of a poor wretch being necessitated to rise from a bed of severe sickness, to undergo the sentence of the law.

The unhappy end of the above convict should prove a dreadful warning and example to servants in general. M'Cormick, previous to the robbery in his master's house, bore a good character; but when it is considered, how great, and as servants should consider, what a sacred trust and confidence is reposed in them by the families with whom they live, character cannot be suffered to save them from an ignominious death, should they rob and plunder, where it is their bounden duty to protect and preserve the property of their masters from every species of depredation.

Londonderry, Nov. 18. We are sorry to hear, that, in consequence of a quarrel at a fair, there have lately been contentions of a serious nature between the Protestants and Papists in some parts of the county of Derry. We are confident that the neighbouring Magistrates and Gentlemen will exert themselves, to prevent any evil consequences, but it peculiarly belongs to the Clergy of the different parishes, to interpose their divine authority, and put a stop to such disgraceful proceedings.

A few days ago, as Mr. Nesbit, one of his Majesty's collectors of hearth money, was coming to Derry, from Enniskillen, he was assaulted, near the old church of Colmore, by one of his Majesty's revenue officers (at present commander of a revenue barge or cutter) accompanied by 4 or 5 of his men, who ordered Mr. Nesbit to stop, which he not instantly doing, one of the men fired at him, the ball of which went close past his cheek; the commander of the barge then fired a pistol himself, which shot Mr. Nesbit's horse, and it was with difficulty he escaped and got to town.—Mr. Nesbit has sworn examinations (from which we state these particulars) against these persons who thus violently and illegally attacked him on the King's high road.

The Limerick Chronicle.

L I M E R I C K

His Majesty has always been the most temperate Monarch living, and particularly abstemious in respect to wine. A year or two ago, when the Sovereign sent to Macklin, the father of the present stage, for inquiry into his particular mode of living, in order to know if it tended to promote his longevity; the veteran replied, that he always lived very freely without overstraining the nature of his constitution, but found singular comfort in a glass of generous wine, even then at the age of ninety-eight. Claret is an excellent bracer, and we could sincerely hope, that as a restorer of the dropsy, a little of Mr. Macklin's mode of living had

Last Monday Sir Henry and Lady Hartstonge arrived at Bath, in perfect health.

The Rev. Deane Hoare acknowledges the receipt of 8l. 1s. 5d. from Col. Lefroy, being a balance of 15l. 3s. 10d. vested in his hands by the late Grand Jury of the county of Limerick, for the purpose of compounding the debts of the confined county Debtors.—A debt of Charles Pickford's of 22l. 15s. 0d. having been compounded by the Col. for 7l. 11s. 8d. (as formerly advertised) and there being but two other County Debtors, either of whom is confined for so large a sum as cannot be compounded by said balance, it has been lodged in Mr. Hoare's hands as treasurer to, and for the use of the County Infirmary.

We have the pleasure to inform the public, that Col. Tarrant, assisted by Mr. Scoble, the Architect, is now surveying the Canal from Killaloe to Limerick, by order of Government.

Remedy for the Stone and Gravel.—Take a sufficient quantity of blackberries, in their unripe state, while they are red; put these into a jar well covered, and set the jar in a kettle of water over the fire; let it continue there five or six hours; then let the juice or pulp pass through a sieve, and to every pint of it add two pounds of white lump sugar powdered; then boil and scum it, as you do other jams or jellies. Take a tea spoonful of this every night going to bed, when in pain; repeat it in the morning if necessary.

TELL TRUTH to Miss G.—in our next. Married. Last Friday, Mr. Thomas Bennis, Sadler, to the agreeable Miss Crowe.

Died. A few days ago, greatly regretted by his friends and acquaintance, Henry Rose, of Barnakile in the county of Limerick, Esq.
