

...promised to send to me, and of the reinforcement of troops and a supply of provisions and stores, which I had some time ordered to be in readiness to join me, by the Major, from the Carnatic, considering the necessary preliminary measures for enabling me to proceed to the attack of Seringapatam at the same time, communicated directions to General Abercromby, and directed him to use every exertion in his power, which might be consistent with the safety of the Army under his command, to prepare himself in the manner that I prescribed, to give me all the assistance when I should reach the enemy's camp.

A Camp made a movement to the North some day that I marched from the Head of Bangalore, I fell in with the assistance of about eight or nine miles; but, from the want of a sufficient number of cavalry, it was found impracticable to pursue a pursuit of considerable length either to bring him to action, or to gain any advantage over him, except that of taking his gun, which, owing to its carriage being broken down, he was obliged to leave upon the road.

My first object being to form a junction with the Nizam's cavalry, I made such movements, or took such positions, as I knew would effectually prevent Tippoo from intercepting them, or even from disturbing their march; but although I was at great pains to point out the safety of the march to Rajah Teigewunt, and to encourage him to proceed, the effects of my recommendations and requests were but slow; and, after waste of time, which, at this late season of the year, was invaluable, and which almost exhausted my patience, the junction was not made till the 13th inst.

It is not easy to ascertain the number of the troops with precision, but I suppose it to amount to 5 or 6,000 horse: and, though they are extremely defective in almost every point of military discipline, yet, as the men are in general well mounted, and the chiefs have given me the strongest assurances of their disposition to do every thing in their power to promote the success of our operations, I am in great hopes that we shall derive material advantage from their assistance.

This junction being accomplished, I marched on to effect my next object without loss of time; and having arrived at my present camp on the 18th, and ordered the most expeditious measures to be taken for transporting the stores from the head of the pass, I shall commence my march again to the westward on the 22d, and after calling at Bangalore for the heavy artillery, I trust that I shall find it practicable to reach Seringapatam before the 22th of next month.

No useful purpose could be promoted by my enumerating the difficulties which I have already encountered in carrying on the operations of this campaign, and it would be equally unprofitable to enlarge at present upon the obstacles which I foresee to our future progress; are, however, of so weighty a nature, that in different circumstances, I should undoubtedly have proceeded with more caution, and defer the attack upon the enemy's capital, till after the

The Swallow packet will remain in readiness to be dispatched in August, or sooner, if it should be thought expedient; and I shall, by that opportunity, have the honour of writing fully to you on several of these subjects, on which you must, no doubt, be anxious to receive minute information. I cannot, however, conclude this letter, without bearing the most ample testimony to the zeal and alacrity which have been uniformly manifested by his Majesty's and Company's troops, in the performance of the various duties of fatigue and danger in the course of this campaign; and assuring you, that they are entitled to the most distinguished marks of your approbation.

I have the honour to be,
with the greatest respect,
Honourable Sirs,
your most obedient and
most humble servant,
CORNWALLIS.
