When Mr. Herschell was in Scotland last Summer at the house of the Abyssinian, Mr. Bruce, he mounted one of his fine telescopes; but the haziness of the weather not allowing them an opportunity of examining celestial objects, he turned his glass towards a waste moor above Falkirk, and amused his host with discriminating the small plants and wild flowers several miles off. A countryman coming in upon business, was desired to look through the telescope. Being asked if he did not admire the genius of the constructor? he replied, "I do; but I look on myself as a much happier man than him; for in the next world I expect much gratification in consequence of my present ignorance of the Stars; but he can have none, since he knows all about them already."

Last Saturday evening, Edward Thompson, who turned approver against the gang of robbers that attacked the House of the Rev. Edmond Palmer, and upon whose clear and unequivocal testimony, five of the gang were capitally convicted last Assizes, died in the City Goal; the Coroner's inquest was held next day, whose verdict was, "that he died by the visitation of God."

Sunday morning about one o'clock, an alarming fire broke out in the turf-house adjoining the House of Industry, on the North Strand, which threatened destruction to that truly charitable and extensive Building;—A detachment from the main-guard, with the fire engine of St. Mary's Parish, was brought out by George Sargent, Esq; late Sheriff; and at 4 o'clock the fire was completely got under, with the loss of a boat of turf which had been put in the preceding day, and the demolition of the entire roof; this loss tho' trivial, may be considered as irreparable to a Charity which has a limited sum for its support, and at no preceding time has it been known to contain so many objects, the number at present therein
