Since Dampierre's death, commenced, who are now retiring precipitately to Lifford. It is said that this last Affair decides the fate of Conde and Valenciennes, as, from the success of the French having lost the forts, which were advantageously situated, cannot make a stand till they are completely surrounded.

Prisoners were all drunk when they were taken, of whom there are many, say, that when the English appeared, they declared they would not fight. The deserters affirm, that to make them fight is to put them between two fires. It is impossible to express adequately the loss of so many fine fellows must be to their Countrymen; but their conduct on this occasion has added another wreath of British Glory.

On this morning in the city, intelligence of the French Royalists having obtained possession of Nantes, and of Orleans had been occupied, the insurgents.—Stocks rose considerably. De Bonille, who had retired, has joined the army of the Duke of York.

MAY 9. Yesterday morning, there was another attempt to throw success. The action which ensued was the fiercest of the whole day: the cannon roared: there were a great many wounded on both sides: no quarter was transpired, we only know that there have been once more beaten from all the points where they were posted.

They were so well disposed; and fight with such vigour, that the French will not be able to give the smallest relief into Conde, unless they are of some thousands of men. The firing of the cannon is as loud as yesterday.

ACCOMMODATION BILLS.

Lord Kenyon in the Court of King's Bench, London, on Friday se'nnight, took notice of the words "Accommodation Bills" in the several Courts of Justice. His Lordship observed, that these sort of Bills had not been heard of in the Courts of Law till of late years; and though they were filed Accommodation Bills, they tended very much to incommode and bring ruin upon the parties concerned with them.—If report be true, many Persons in this Kingdom, and we are sorry to add, in this City, have felt the force of his Lordship's observation.—Probably the names of those persons who have thus prejudiced the credit of the fair Trader, may appear in a future publication!

To GEORGE DUHIGG MORGAN, Esq; formerly Cornet in the 4th Horse, and late Captain in the Earl of Inchiquin's Regiment of Fencibles.

SIR, In the course of one month, I do not receive a satisfactory account of the trust reposed in you by me, so long ago as the month of October, 1790, I will publish the transaction at large, and leave the public to judge of the propriety of your conduct. Not being able to find out your address, am obliged to give this public notice. CHARLES LIONEL FITZGERALD. Lodge, Dec. 8, 1791.

Not having received any answer to my notice published on the 8th of December last, "To George Duhigg Morgan, formerly Cornet in the 4th Horse, and late Captain in the Earl of Inchiquin's Regiment of Fencibles"—agreeable to my promise, I think it necessary to state to the public the transaction at large, as alluded to in that notice:

Having known the said George Duhigg Morgan when in the 4th Horse, and having some time prior to the month of September, 1790, met him by accident at Castlebar, I gave him an invitation to my house, which he then, and repeatedly since, availed himself of. At his last visit to me, which was in the month of September, 1790, he remained with me until I set out for the fair of Ballinasloe, in the October following, to which place he accompanied me, and, as he told me, he would proceed from thence to Dublin. On parting with him at Ballinasloe, I entrusted him with a sum of 132l. 19s. to pay to my order in Dublin, which he promised he would most punctually execute, and which promise he most shamefully never performed, nor, for which has he since ever attempted to make the smallest apology. Hearing that he still assumes the character of a Gentleman, and appears in public, I think this statement absolutely necessary, to prevent others from suffering as I have done, from the perfidy of such a fellow.

If any person will procure me an interview with the said Morgan, I will pay said person the sum of Twenty Guineas. CHARLES LIONEL FITZGERALD. Lodge, May 5, 1793.

††† The said George Duhigg Morgan is about five feet ten or eleven inches high, much marked with the small pox, remarkable high forehead, little hair on his head, and is between forty and fifty years old. (3 p.)
