

power of France.—Spain has hitherto existed as a maritime state only, by the junction of her marine with that of France, and when the French navy is annihilated, that of Spain cannot exist.—Britain will then be really what she has often been called, the uncontrolled Sovereign of the Sea.

The atrocities of the French Convention have produced a very general change in the public opinion and wishes with respect to the politics of that unhappy country. The war certainly is still highly unpopular, but it is so in consequence of the commercial distress, &c. which it induces rather than in consequence of the cause of France being considered as that of suffering freedom. Peace is still the general wish, but it is wished for as following the defeat of the monsters who now are paramount in that distracted kingdom, rather than a compromise or a defeat of the combined powers. The truth of this appeared strongly during the uncertainty of the event of Lord Howe's affair with the French Squadron. Hope seemed erect at the idea of his success, and disappointment the greatest mortification which the public mind could suffer.

We hear from Cork, that Mr. Doyle, a revenue officer of that city, and who was formerly comedian on the Dublin Theatre, is now getting up a play, the produce of which is to be applied towards providing winter clothing for the British soldiers now serving on the continent—the performers are to be such gentlemen of that city as are eminent for their abilities in Theatricals—Mr. Daly, we hear, has generously permitted the use of his Theatre Royal for that night, free of expense.

Mr. Borough failed on Monday night, with Lord and Lady Hobart, for England.

L I M E R I C K.
 The principal Inhabitants and Citizens of this City, were so highly pleased with the good conduct of the Soldiers of the 42d Regt. or Highlanders, during their being stationed at Town, that they have generously subscribed a subscription amounting to little short of 1000 Guineas, which they have remitted to the Major, with a request that he may lay out the same in purchasing of woollen Drawers or Caps, as may be most pleasing to the Corps; the Major has accompanied this Subscription with a most polite letter expressive of the high opinion this respectable corps is held in by the Inhabitants of Hull.
 On Thursday evening the Rev. John Bennett, attended by twenty of the 34th Regiment, in the command of Ensign Luton, brought down, and safely lodged in the County Jail the following notorious offenders, (lately condemned by Charles Siver Oliver, Esq; Thomas Condon, Patrick Mahony, James Darby Hennefy, John Doherty, there be no complaining at this joyful season.—

*How many pine in Want and Dungeon Grooms, rot from the common Air, and common Use,
 Of their Limbs; How many drink the Cup
 Of baleful Grief, or eat the bitter Bread
 Of misery:—*

By refusing them from wretchedness you gladden the hearts, not only of them and their Families, but even of their Creditors, some of whom are miserable as themselves, and want what they are not able to pay them.

For the truth of the above they refer to the Rev. John Hoare who knows their deplorable situation, and who will thankfully acknowledge any Benefactions sent to him, which he will dispose of in the best manner, either to liberate them if sufficient be given; or to alleviate those Evils which they must submit to till better times.

ON THE DEATH of SAMUEL HARDING, Esq.

How throbs each breast! how streams each tearful eye!
 To see the candid gen'rous HARDING die;
 Whose honest heart which never knew deceit,
 Was more thro' honour than thro' fortune great.

Sweet were his manners, affable and kind,
 His soul how great! how tender was his mind:
 His word so good no double meaning knew,
 Sincerely firm, judicious, just and true;
 Free like a Man, he scorn'd the ways of art,
 For candour spoke the language of his heart;
 They who best knew him here, alone can tell,
 How much bemoan'd their social good man fell!

His weeping Tenants, have alas! to mourn,
 The feeling Landlord, from their bosoms torn.
 Fair Charity complains she lost a friend,
 With heartfelt grief deplores her Guardian's end;
 But Justice smil'd, and bade her fav'rite go,
 Unto that place, where endless pleasures flow;
 Go then she said, and quit this stage of strife,
 And gain the mansions of eternal life.
