

to defeat a scheme so pregnant with the most signal benefits to the country, attempts to prove that the terms are highly disadvantageous to the Subscribers, and that they might lay out their money with much greater profit to themselves in the Funds.

We are not in the least surpris'd at any inconsistencies which appear in the statements of men, who have only one fixed principle, that of enmity to the existing Government, to regulate their conduct. But we are truly happy to say, that this is a proud day for Old England, when, in contradiction to all the false assertions of the Opposition, and their advocates, who have invariably maintained the impossibility of raising any considerable sum by voluntary contributions; it has been proved, that the spirit of the nation, as their confidence in the present Administration, is unimpaired; and that the pledge given by men of property, to stand forward whenever called upon, in support of the War and of the Government, was not vainly given. The sum already subscribed, in point of magnitude, and of the alacrity with which it was advanced, stands without a parallel in the annals of the world; and it must strike our enemies with dismay to find, that in the fifth year of the war, when their resources are exhausted, we can, without the smallest difficulty, provide for the increased expences of the State.

With regard to the visionary schemes ascribed by the Opposition Writers to our Government, we shall merely observe, that they never extended beyond the circumscribed limit of their own prolific brain; and that the Minister, after taking due time to mature his plan, has adhered to it with a degree of firmness which has been fully justified by its success.

We learn, with a degree of satisfaction, in which all true Britons will participate, that yesterday, at the close of the books, about Fourteen Millions had been subscribed. The list of Subscribers already comprizes many, not only of the most eminent monied men of the City, but of the principal Nobility; and we had a very peculiar satisfaction in hearing, that the name of His Grace the Duke of Bedford is down for One Hundred Thousand Pounds.

The East India Company yesterday held their adjourned General Court, the resolution of which was to subscribe Two Millions for the service of the ensuing year, upon the plan proposed by the Minister, and previously adopted by the Bank.

DUBLIN—DECEMBER 8.

It was reported on Thursday in London, that the master of a Spanish brig, arrived at Southampton from Dieppe, said accounts of a great naval engagement had been received before he sailed, but he did not recollect any of the particulars, only that it happened near the Italian coast.

LIMERICK,—DECEMBER 10.

Every report of Invasion and continuance of the War only serves to increase the spirit of loyalty and self-defence in the Inhabitants of Limerick.—We rejoice to hear that several Gentlemen, whose avocations do not permit them to inroll in the present Yeomanry Corps of this City, have signified their wishes to form a Corps on the principle of a Garrison Battalion, to be disciplined, and ready to assist the Civil Power on all occasions, within the City.—The Mayor has approved this plan, and with that zeal which he invariably displays in the duties of his office, and wherein he meets the co-operation of his Fellow-Citizens, is ready to give his utmost aid to compleat the measure:—He has also suggested the propriety of every person coming forward himself, as well as Gentlemen's advising their domesticks to come before him, and testify their loyalty, by taking the Oath of Allegiance, prescribed in the Yeomanry Act.

The following singularly shocking accident happened on Thursday night last, or early on Friday morning: A Mrs. Peacock, relict of Mr. William Peacock, formerly of this City, and late of the Island of Barbadoes, who lodged in a house nearly opposite the Parade, was found burned in a room under that which she inhabited; having, as it appears, been sitting at the fire, which caught her cloaths, and being unable to extricate herself, tumbled on the floor, which was also consumed, and thro' which her remains fell, providentially the entire building, with a number of inhabitants, escaped a similar fate, being alarmed by a man who lay in the room into which the unfortunate victim fell.
