DIED. On Saturday se'nnight at Tralee, deservedly lamented by a large and respectable circle of friends and relatives, Christopher Willow, Esq; formerly a Lieutenant in the army. He, for many years, endured the incessant pain of the gout, in its highest degree of excruciating torture, not only with resignation and fortitude, but with perfect equanimity, yet gradually sunk under the aggravated, unremitting pressure of that tormenting disorder. His remains were escorted to the family vault, in the Cathedral of Ardferit, and interred with military honors, by an officer's detachment of the Devon and Cornwall Fencibles, followed by the regimental band, with muffled drums, &c. and attended by Captain Crosbie's Corps of Yeomanry Cavalry, and a long procession of sorrowing friends, on whose memory his eulogy must remain engraven deeply, while recollection of unaffected worth, strict integrity, unfulfilled honor, and sincerity can impress the mind.
