

...of his Country, to precipitate the Consultation into a gulph, from whence it could never emerge.

Mr. W. B. PONSONBY observed, that as a number of gentlemen were not in possession of the documents from whence they were to estimate the general principle of the measure, he would vote against the going into Committee, and moved the question of adjournment—on a division there appeared

For the adjournment 89
Against it 76

Mr. G. PONSONBY said, that in a pamphlet he held in his hand, purporting to be a report of the Noble Lord's speech on a former night, he found it set forth that full time would be allowed for considering the question before he would be called on to discuss it. He had no doubt of the authenticity of this report, from authority under which it was printed; and requested Gentlemen would attend while he would read a passage from it.—Here Mr. Ponsonby read Lord Castlereagh's declaration, that he would give sufficient time to consider the detail before he would bring on the question, and stating that the articles should be printed, and he himself would be answerable for the delivery of them to the different Members of that House on the following day.—Mr. Ponsonby observed, that so far from receiving them the next day, he had never seen them until yesterday, and would therefore appeal to the noble Lord's candour and good sense, whether he had sufficient time fully to appreciate and comprehend papers of this extensive nature, including the consideration of revenue, commerce and trade, in order to decide on a question of such imperious moment.— From these considerations he trusted Ministers would grant the postponement required.

Lord COLE, Sir J. PARNELL, and Colonel BARRY, followed at considerable length, to insist on the propriety of adjourning until Monday.
—Mr. Hardy and Sir J. Blaquiere opposed the adjournment.

Mr. P. BURROWES said, it appeared as if the opposite side of the House wished to gain an additional argument in favour of the Union—not by showing that the House was converted by the Minister to his State purpose, but that the Parliament was fallen with impurity—that impurity and imperfection, which of late the Gentlemen opposite inflicted with such pertinacity.—It was impossible to make a due estimate of the abstract of Union, without submitting those documents on which it was founded as a boon to the nation, and a blessing to the people. If it failed to convey, or was incapable of conveying those benefits, the principle must be bad, and the measure might be rejected. Gentlemen, therefore, could not decide without what must demonstrate to them the merit or demerits of Union.—Mr. Burrowes declared himself unfriendly to it, however modified or qualified, but other Gentlemen might not have his rooted aversion to it, who yet if they discovered it bad, would spurn it in limine.

Mr. Sec. COOKE observed, that on the day the Noble Lord first submitted the subject matter of Legislative Union to the House, the documents alluded to were printed, and sent down to that House to be circulated among the Members.— Mr. Cooke was not able to say from his own knowledge, whether or not the notices were duly and timely distributed, but he could declare, that the Noble Lord had done every thing on his part, in order to give gentlemen all the satisfaction about the question in his power.

Lord CASTLEREAGH said, that in compliance with the wish of the House he had already postponed the question, and that if Gentlemen wished to be informed, they had every opportunity, as the details were in the public Newspapers the very day after they were laid before the House.

Sir J. MACARTNEY replied that he had not received any information on the subject until within these few days, when it was impossible for independent messengers.

Mr. A. MOORE, in most animated speech of great length and ability, reproached the impropriety of hurrying a question of such moment, before the House was in possession of the necessary documents, and moved that the question be adjourned to Monday next, which was seconded by Colonel Barry, and after a long debate the House divided on the motion, Ayes 110—Noes 137.

Tellers for the Ayes, Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr.
H. Osborne.—For the Noes, Sir J. Blaquiere, and Mr. C. M. Omsby.

The Speaker's leaving the Chair was fill much opposed, and after some conversation,

Mr. G. PONSONBY having urged the expediency of still postponing the Committee to Monday,

Lord CASTLEREAGH observed, that altho' he did conceive that every previous notice and opportunity was afforded, as the Hon. Gentleman requested the delay, he was satisfied, for information sake, and as it appeared to accommodate the opposite side of the House, to consent to it.

On which the Committee postponed to Monday.—Adjourned at 3 o'clock.

Yesterday, a most numerous and highly respectable meeting of the Freeman and Freeholders of this City was held at the Sessions-house, at which the High Sheriff presided, when among other Resolutions against a Union, the following was unanimously agreed to:—"We solemnly declare that we will not, from and after the first day of July, upon any account whatsoever, in long as this destructive measure shall be persevered in, ourselves use, or permit in our respective families the use of any manufacture which shall not have been made in Ireland."

CLOVELL, Feb. 15. On the night of Tuesday the 4th inst. the hay-rard, barn, stable, and dwelling-house on the lands of Whiteland, were feloniously set on fire, and burned to ashes, together with several ploughs, &c.
The wretched perpetrators of this horrid deed had even the cruelty of suffering two Cows to be burned in like manner.

Monday and Tuesday last, the Cavan Regiment of Militia marched home for Cahel and Thurles, at which times they are to remain on duty 'til further orders.

LIMERICK.—FEBRUARY 19.

On Thursday last, George Evans Bruce, Esq; was sworn in High Sheriff for the County Limerick;—at the same time Joseph Crisp, Esq; of this City, was sworn in Sub-Sheriff for said County for the ensuing year.—Mr.
Crisp holds his Office at his House, Main-Street, near the Barracks.

The Venus Frigate, Sir T. Graves, having on board part of the 56th and 62d Regiments, from Portsmouth, put into this River on Friday last, having sprung her main mast in a gale of wind; she was bound for Cork.—The Troops arrived here yesterday.

Sunday evening five Companies of the 56th Regiment, who were disembarked from the Diadem of 64 guns, (as mentioned in our last) marched into this City.—Several of the Soldiers suffered much from fatigue on their passage from Portsmouth, and one Man died at Newtown-Pery, while conveying to the Hospital.

MARRIED. Last Sunday, Mr. John Madden, of the City of Dublin, Brewer, to the amiable Miss Butler, of Franklin's-quay, daughter to the late Theobald Butler, of Willford, County Tipperary, Esq.

DIED. Last Saturday, at Cloughjordan, in the Co.
Tipperary, Benjamin Tydd, Esq; Esq; he was in the fullness of the words, an honest man—he lived beloved and respected, and died sincerely regretted, by a numerous acquaintance.
