

General Laines has proposed to take the Corsican for some troops to fight against England, but we believe of the diamonds from Brazil proposal to be forgotten, at least in the city of Spain.

Surprised here that not one of the Chief is nominated to command; some think he dares not trust they are discontented, and have hands; it is even said, one of the Generals answered lately when he was in Germany, that as the army intended to plunder and not to fight, Lucien, or our favourite Marse were fitter to command it than any great discontent prevails, not only General Officers, but amongst the those ordered to the Colonies, or sent there, look upon themselves as dishonoured, and sacrificed; and the of Bonaparte in his appointments Honour, where few of Moreau's of those who fought under P. are admitted, has caused a and murder, and the French talk of the Milliard so often before they expose their lives for one man.

Cork, May 18.—A very hot press has taken place in this City, and so very general, that application has, we understand, been made to Government on the subject. We are perfectly convinced, that no unnecessary exertion would be made by the Naval Commission employed here on that service; but we are also so well aware of the exigence of the period, that it is proper if any discretionary exercise of this duty be made, that it should be under the special command of Government.

LIMERICK, MAY 21.

Bonaparte has been reckoned to imitate Oliver Cromwell in some very striking instances, but in none more nearly, than his late Charioteering expedition;—Oliver, having got six Friesland coach-horses as a present from the Count of Oldenburgh, undertook, for his amusement, to drive them about Hyde Park; he fell on the pole, was dragged upon the ground for some time, a pistol which he carried in his pocket went off,—and by that singular good fortune which ever attended him, he was taken up without any considerable hurt or bruise. Perhaps the old adage also awaits the present Republican Ruler;—but Oliver suffered not at Tyburn until after his Resurrection!

The Jamaica frigate, of 26 guns, Captain Jonas Rose, which was stationed in this River some time back, arrived at Plymouth on Thursday the 18th inst. with volunteers and impressed men.

Wednesday night, the Collector of Limerick received an order from Dublin, to prevent the sailing of any vessels from this port.

Thursday night, the house of Mr. Wm. Benson, at Green Hills, in this County, was burst down, together with his furniture, by some evil-minded wretches, supposed to be the same who posted a written Notice of the most threatening nature, opposite his door the morning preceding.—It will be recollected, that an attack was made by a Banditti on Benson's house, on the night of the 3d January last, when he shot Daniel Ryan, one of the party, dead—ever since, Benson and Family have been deterred from residing on their farm.

Yesterday, the sloop Eagle, arrived from Dublin, with Ordnance Stores for this Garrison,—a Colonel and two Gunners of the Royal Corps of Artillery, accompanied them.

This morning two Troops of the 12th Regiment of Light Dragoons arrived in town from Bandon and Mallow.
