

known among all persons con- sidering, that the King could not, under authority, constitute the Commission, necessarily follow that it could only be effected by letters patent under the Great Seal. This idea could not have been established, if the consequence must indeed follow, that persons tried and found guilty long ago, in circumstances, critically similar, and called for the same objections, must be equally executed. Baron Daly con- sidering the Lordship's opinion, after which he was called, with great modesty, addressed the Court, saying, that it was a duty imposed upon him, Quigley, to argue on the same point with all the force of which he was capable, and he trusted, notwithstanding the objections of the Court, he would be able to cite such precedents without arrogating the power of re- pealing a specific precedent, which, under the influence of candour and humanity, by which he is unquestionably distinguished, he would not excite some doubt or hesitation as to the propriety of his case, notwithstanding the similarity it bore to that of his fellow here expatiated, with acknow- ledgement, on certain cases of demurrer in which the noble Lord (Avonmore) sitting on this Commission, said "that no- thing is so repugnant to reason or to common sense as to be conformable to law." From these precedents, in aid of the points of law, professional co-adjutors, he would have brought forward as a matter of humanity, to be considered by the Court, and extend at least the advantage of having his case argued, and admitted to all the advan- tages of a professional process and consequent re- sult, and over-ruled all the objections.

On Tuesday, November 1. A man was put to the bar, on an indictment, on the 12th of March last, in which several other persons, robbed the person of Mr. Byrnes, of Dolphin's-barn, at that on the evening of the day laid down, between the hours of seven and eight, having opened the door of his house to a company who had been with him, and to the number of six, two of whom had their hands on their faces, rushed into his room, and a Mr. McDonnell, with his hands on his face, from an adjacent house, and sup- plied them with all their property which he possessed, and spare his life. They were manœuvring within and outside the house, they took Mr. McDonnell into custody, and on an interim prosecutor found occasion to search his rooms where he found some arms; a large pistol which was charged, and a Mr. McDonnell, with his hands on his face, from an adjacent house, and supplied them with all their property which he possessed, and spare his life.

The robbers came back, fired upon him, which he returned, after giving them a wound by a shot from a pistol. All the assailants missed him, one only having a door of an upper apartment, which he succeeded in robbing of the sum of £100 in cash, a blunderbuss, same street. Those fellows have a large iron bar, with which they can force any door open. It is only doing justice to Mr. Sullivan's man, to say of him, that on a second attempt on his master's house, at 12 o'clock the same night, he fired on those fel- lows, and it is supposed, he wounded one of them.

We hear from Thurles, that on Tuesday night last a single robber entered the house of a Constable in that neighbourhood, and demanded his arms; when the latter instantly discharged a loaded blun- derbuss at the audacious villain, and shot him dead upon the spot. Although the body was publicly exposed in Thurles, no information had been ob- tained on Tuesday of the robber's name or place of abode.

Tuesday night, a fire broke out in one of the stables of Mr. Cannell, Inn-keeper, in Nenagh, which, we are concerned to state, not only consu- med the building, but also eleven horses therein; this shocking accident, we hear, arose through the negligence of a Driver, from Roserea, sticking a lighted candle against the wall of the stable, which falling among the hay, produced the conflagration. We are happy to find it will by no means prevent Mr. Cannell carrying on his business with that spirit which has gained him the esteem of the public. See Advertisement.

On Wednesday, a duel took place near New- bridge, in this County, between Francis Earaght, Esq; Attorney, and Lieutenant Delmage, of the Rathkeale Yeomen Infantry; both parties fired by signals, and on the first fire the former Gentleman was mortally wounded, and expired on the ground; by which unfortunate event, society has lost one of its most valuable members, as he was a young man of the strictest honour and integrity, a most affec- tionate brother, — and is sincerely and deservedly regretted by a numerous and most respectable ac- quaintance, being, in every sense of the word, an ornament to his profession.

Wednesday night, a fine Boy, 5 years old, son to Mr. John Gubbins, of Mary's-street, fell off the flag-way at his father's door, at which time a horse and car, heavily laden, went over the child's neck; he languished until next night, when death relieved him from his agonies.
