LONDON, JAN. 27, 28, 29, 30.

Abercrombie Robinson, Esq. Secreta-Marquis Cornwallis, arrived at the In-yesterday afternoon, with dispatches John Barlow, dated October 23, an-the deeply-regretted death of the Mar-wallis at Ghazepoor, in the province on the 5th of October. Upon this subject a Gazette Extraordinary was at Calcutta. These dispatches were home in the Medusa frigate, Capt. Sir e, which arrived at Weymouth, from eighty-four days. The frigate was off Wight on Tuesday; but a strong adspringing up, Sir John Gore bore Weymouth, where the dispatches were entrusted to the care of Mr. Secre-son, who reached town yesterday af-ly to the death of the Noble Marquis, been received of the release of the agency by Scindia, and of Mr. Jenal in the camp of Major Gen. Jones, they may be erroneous; but, at a without any disguise whatever, and not, that a remedy will now be ap-abuse.

notes.—Henchy confessed that it was also their determination to have murdered a most respectable character, who was passing, had he happened to notice the breach, or come too near the slip, where they had the desk.

Sunday night, some ill-disposed person threw a large brick against the front of Mr. Carroll's shop, chandler, in Broad-street; which must have been flung with deliberate violence, as, notwithstanding the shutters being up, several panes of glass were broken.

Yesterday evening, as a lamp-lighter was ascending his ladder, it broke in the centre, by which he was precipitated into an area, but fortunately a slight contusion on the head only ensued. He was instantly brought to the County Hospital, and treated with the most becoming attention.

On Sunday night, about 12 o'clock, 5 villains attacked a gentleman in Newtown Pery, and would have robbed him, had he not fortunately pretended having reached his own door—upon which the miscreants ran off, taking his hat.— We think it our duty to acquaint the public of this circumstance, in order that each citizen may be prepared against any similar attempt in future. We are authorised to offer a reward of 5 guineas to any of the party, (the offender who knocked off the hat excepted) for discovering and prosecuting him, the said offender, to conviction. In this city, which abounds in sources of employment to the well-meaning and industrious, the residence and livelihood of each idle and suspicious vagrant should attract most minute vigilance from each public officer.

With the deepest concern we inform our readers, of the death of the Rev Thomas Lefroy, Rector of Ashe, Hampshire, and Compton, Surry, England, and brother of that distinguished gentleman, Colonel Lefroy of this city: On the 19th ult. an apoplectic fit terminated the mortal career of this incomparable character, at the place. His life was a successive tenor of religious ardor, and munificent liberality to his poor fellow creatures. His virtues, the remembrance of which will be impressively retained by his friends to the latest period of their existence, were the spontaneous growth of a mind influenced by the finest feelings of good-nature, and an heart actuated by the purest spring of cordial benignity.
With native talents richly improved by education, and consummated by reflection, he ever exercised them with unalterable steadiness in the paths of virtue, and thus became another ornament to his honorable family and connexions. In the pulpit he united a singular penetration and extent of knowledge to a perspicuous and graceful manner that at once adorned the clerical profession, exalted him in general estimation, and rendered him 'to all the country dear.'

Captain Warburton acknowledges to have received the following Subscriptions, in addition to the Sums lately acknowledged by him:—

the events of the late campaign have left Bonaparte without a single competitor on the Continent.— The capitulation of Ulm, and the battle of Austerlitz, have dissolved the mightiest combination ever formed for the resistance of immeasurable ambition. Both the moral and physical force of France, great as they were before, have been almost doubled by the peace of Presburgh; for the new Monarchies which have started up, and the whole of Italy, are as much part of the means of the French Empire, as if solemnly incorporated with it. The next summer will probably see the Camps at Boulogne revived and occupied by the legions destined for the invasion of Great Britain. Against a danger so proximate and assured, the strongest security next to the spirit and unanimity of the people, will rest in an Administration comprising the talents of the leading men of the land. No narrow arrangement will of ought to satisfy the Country. It is not "your safe politicians" (men whose only merit consists in meaning well) can oppose and controul our implacable enemy. The enthusiasm and vigour and devotedness of the Country must be awakened and excited. Let not our gallant population be palsied by any pusillanimous sentiment: His Majesty will, no doubt, exercise the high privilege with which the Constitution has invested him, according to the best of his judgment, for the benefit of us all; and we will as we ought, acquiesce in the choice he shall make.
But between action and passion, the difference in political arithmetic, is incalculable. The state of Europe is such that we fear no permanent repose can be enjoyed, until the ambition of France is either satiated or destroyed. When the sea is unruffled and the sky serene, the most inexperienced seaman in the ship can take his spell at the helm, but when the tempest comes, when the "Lab'ring bark climbs hills of seas," the ablest pilot should seize the rudder. Where is the most skilled Palinurus to be now sought for? From our soul we say, amongst that phalanx of talent, hereditary honour, and extensive property, which constitutes what is called the Parliamentary Opposition.
