ERICK, FEBRUARY 11, 1806.

Friday night, Nicholas M'Innerney, from at of the county of Clare, going on board lying at Arthur's-quay, missed his step, and though his cries directed a few people place, to give every assistance, he was and before their arrival. His body was taken the following day, and an inquest held on the Mayor.—Verdict—Accidental death.

Saturday night, a young women, going on a boat at Arthur's-slip, fell in, but was forly saved by the timely aid of Daniel and Namara.

oday evening, about 4 o'clock, the mate o sailors, belonging to the Swedish ship, burton, of Stockholm, lying in this river, pleasuring in a small sail boat, but did not it far, when a sudden squall of wind upset at, by which the three perished, before any the assistance could be given them.

The paragraph which a Print on Saturday put under the Tralee head, was borrowed verbatim, from our Limerick news.—It could not have been transferred from any Kerry Print, particularly as we condensed it from resolutions of very great length, entered into at a meeting of the principal characters in said quarter.

The growing manufactures of this country-are peculiarly deserving of our support, and there is no branch of our national industry, perhaps, which bids fairer to arrive at excellence and prosperity, if suffered to remain unfettered by heavy duties, than our Paper Manufacture. The exertions which Mr. J. B. O'Sullivan, of Cork, is now making, both in this and the sister kingdom, (assisted, no doubt, by the co-operation of the other respectable Paper Makers of the kingdom) to preserve this valuable article from the misrepresentations of commercial jealousy on the other side of the water, we trust may be crowned with the success which they deserve, and that the native industry of Ireland may be suffered to come into the English market, with those advantages to which it is so fairly entitled.

Wednesday his Majesty's ship Brilliant, Captain Barrie, arrived at the Cove of Cork, from a cruize.

Thursday his Majesty's ship Alcmene, Captain Brisbane, and sleop Espiagle, Captain Morris, arrived in Cork harbour from a cruize.

On Monday last, the William, Captain Sinclair, a West-Indian, outward-bound, from Liverpool to Cork, for convoy, and from thence to Trinidada, ran on shore on Dunmore-strand, nearly opposite the hotel. The crew have been all saved-and the vessel and cargo (the latter consisting mostly of stores), are likely to be got off, without sustaining any material injury. This vessel, considering her situation, had a wonderful escape from destruction—she remained several hours on a lee-shore, expecting every moment to be dashed against the rocks. In consequence of signals from those on shore, she ran in on the strand, and both lives and property were most probably preserved by this judicious conduct.-Brigadier-General De L'Hoste, who resides at Dunmore, immediately paid every possible attention that such a misfortune would admit of-and his exertions were actively seconded by the inhabitauts of the village, who vied with each other in rendering their services. The sea fencibles of the district also essentially contributed their assistance by guarding the vessel during the night; and Mr. Kennedy, who is agent on this coast to the principal London Insurance Companies, has been as alert as usual in attending to the interests of the underwriters. (Waterford Chronicle.

On Tuesday last, the George and Ann, of and from Liverpool, Thomas Stephens, master, was stranded at Bonmahon:—the crew were saved, but the vessel and cargo, it is feared, will be lost.

Yesterday, at an adjournment of the Quarter Sessions for this City, Michael Normile, Sawyer, was tried for assaulting John Ledget, Slater.—Upon the most satisfactory evidence being adduced the Jury without much hesitation found him guilty. The Recorder with his usual perspicuity, expatiated on the dangerous tendency of such violence, if not restrained by an exemplary interference of the law, and therefore felt himself but doing an essential benefit to ociety in sentencing the prisoner to 2 years confinement, and requiring security for his behaviour after its expiration.
