

attendants. No less than thirty-four witnesses were subpoenaed the greatest part of whom we have reason to believe will be examined, and the Briefs of the Counsel on both sides are of uncommon length, so that trial may be expected to occupy an unusual length of time.

The Counsel for the Prosecution are Messrs. Garrow, Knowles, and Const: among those for Mr. Patch, are Mr. Searjeant Best and Mr. Gurney.

Many of those who attended so early as six in the morning were unable to get admission, even although furnished with the necessary introductions; indeed, never has the public anxiety seemed to be so much excited on any public occasion since the State Trials of Colonel Despard and his associates. Many who succeeded so far as the outer Court, were unable to proceed further; and so great was their curiosity, that they remained in that situation, until a late hour, without either hearing or seeing any thing.
