TRIAL OF LORD MELVILLE.

FOURTEENTH DAY.

the most splendid day of the trial. The expecting Mr. Whitbread's reply was sufficient to excite curiosity. The galleries were consequently fill-ily hour, and every seat allotted to that elegant bevy of females; the Peereses, was entirely occupied.— er, and most of the Members of the House of in town, attended The Dukes of Gloucester, nderidge, Sussex, Clarence, and York, were in ion; but the Prince of Wales was not in Court half an hour afterwards. The Lord Chancellor igned the Managers to commence their reply, rney General (Sir A. Pigott) came forward and the Court in a speech of an hour and a half, with-erence to the facts, but solely in answer to the le-raised by the Defendant's Counsel. He fulfilled oubtedly to the complete satisfaction of all the and the Public, for it was not possible that any on mere questions of law, could have urged his with more eloquence, dignity, and vigour of n he did. His style and manner were exactly sui-place. He was perfectly distinct and audible—his ressive—his arguments convincing. As the Pub-are not yet acquainted with the principles upon Counsel for the Defendant have rested their defence, y observe, that the Attorney General confined him-representation of their dangerous tendency. He left s to the facts to the principal Manager.

Whitbread began at a quarter before one o'clock.— at three he observed, that though neither exhausted of mind or body, he yet felt he had so much more to do that it was impossible he could conclude within any time, and therefore as the day was so far advanced, the Court would consent to an adjournment till was immediately assented, and the Lord Chancel-led the Court.

Whitbread will conclude this day; and we understand their Lordships mean to adjourn till Wednesday when they will give judgment. In the mean time, the Court with respect to publishing the proceedings will and our readers must not expect that gratification to afford them, till the day after the verdict is pro-part of Common Pleas on Saturday last decided a law of the utmost importance to the commercial world to every man who has any transactions with change; it was a point saved upon a verdict given at Nisi Prius before Lord Norbury at the sittings of the present Term, where it was contended that an endorsee, the holder of a Bill of Exchange, which when it became dishonoured, regularly protested, and notice given to the parties, had by taking new securities from the drawer of the bill, still holding in his possession the original bill, and which drawer afterwards became insolvent, was an endorser. The contrary was contended for on the other side. After hearing Counsel on both sides, in the Court upon the case were cited, the Court was of opinion that no case puts the drawer and endorser of a bill of exchange at a different point of liability; that in this case all the law having due notice of the protest, ought to have taken; and upon the principle that indulgence in notice given to any, except the acceptor, does not discharge the endorser, and there being no case to be found to the contrary, the verdict for the Plaintiff should stand by establishing the right of an endorser under various instances where due diligence had been used, and the drawer, to recover from the endorser.

NOTICE.

Seeing an Advertisement in the Cork and Limerick Papers, setting forth that a certain Firm lately commenced Business in Dublin, were not authorised in inserting in their Circular Letters their succeeding Messrs. Peck & Grimshaw;— Now, We whose names are herewith subscribed, and who formerly appointed Messrs. Peck & Grimshaw our Agents for the Sale of Printed Goods, White Muslins, &c. do declare, that we were as much actuated in handing over our Commissions to Messrs. John Malone & Co. from the former Firm intimating to us their determination of resigning Business, (and further, giving the Alphabet of their Leger for the purpose of distributing those very Circular Letters they condemn,) as from our high esteem and confidence of the latter Firm; and, we solicit a continuance of that partiality to our Manufacture, which will continue on sale at Messrs. John Malone & Co.'s, No. 10, Exchange-street, now our Agents in Dublin.
