

the insertion of which may be attended with considerable advantage to those deprived of sight.— On the 22d ult. Surgeon Barclay, (Moy, Charlemont Fort) performed an operation on the eyes of Rose Counolan, who lives near English Church, co. Armagh, aged 23 years, born blind, in consequence of which she has received sight, and can distinguish the smallest object; she at present is clearly illustrative of the fact, that all ideas of external objects are received through the medium of the senses. Surgeon Barclay has happily succeeded in restoring others to their sight who were blind.

The General Advertiser.

LIMERICK, JULY 11.

The last Gazette contains another instance of that determined and irresistible bravery which has lifted the character of the British Navy to what it is. We regret that this triumph, so highly honourable to all those who have contended for it, has been purchased at such an expence.—See Gaz.

Last night a meeting of the Medical Gentlemen of this city took place at their Society-room, for the purpose of adopting the best and most advantageous measures of contributing immediate assistance to persons apparently drowned; we have no doubt from the exertions of the faculty, and the liberal contributions of the inhabitants, towards putting their plans in execution, but that they will be productive of the utmost advantage to society.

In the last and this day's Gazette, we have inserted the Stamp Duty Schedule, at the request of many of our most respectable readers, that they may not be led into disagreeable difficulties from an ignorance of the increased impositions.

Last night Major-General Taylor arrived in this city from Cork, and this morning inspected the detachment of the 23d Light Dragoons quartered here—he will return to-morrow.

This day, about 12 o'clock, there were several violent claps of thunder, accompanied with heavy showers of rain, which continued for nearly two hours.

DEATHS.

Last Wednesday, at Killidistart, co. Clare, sincerely lamented, Mrs. England, wife of Mr. Thomas England, jun. Mary-street.—In Jamaica, of the yellow fever, in the bloom of life, T. O'Brien, Esq. late of William-street, in this city;—the moral and personal accomplishments of this young gentleman, renders his loss to society and his afflicted Parents, truly irreparable.—In John-street, Miss Margaret Bushell, eldest daughter of Mr. Edward John Bushell.—Last Thursday, on Sullivan's-quay, Cork, Mr. John Dwyer.—Monday morning, at his house in Cove-st. Cork, the Rev. Edward Synan.—On George's-Quay, Cork, Miss Mary Frankland.—Last week in Dingle, co. Kerry, Mr. Bryan M'Mahon, revenue officer.—Monday last, Mrs. Healy, wife of Mr. Thomas Healy, of Ballygarret, co. Kerry.—Lately, at Vienna, General Melas, Bonaparte's adversary at the memorable battle of Marengo.—At Antigua, on the 11th of October, Daniel O'Connor, Esq. First Surgeon of his Majesty's ship Nimrod.—At his house in Castle-st. Belfast, after a short illness, Mr. John Halliday.

the coffee, sugar and cotton of her colonies, which find their way to Europe, must go there under the cover of a neutral.— What is the presumption? That a large part of those productions, thus transported, are relatively to Britain enemy's property. How is a discrimination to be made between those products which are, and those which are not the property of an enemy?—Is it not a fact that a few disreputable characters will bring a stigma on a whole neighbourhood? Will any man deny the fact? Are the French and Spanish colonies independent? And what is the fact? That under the neutral flag, the whole of the immensely valuable productions of those colonies find a conveyance. What do we say? That we have a right to carry those productions from the colonies to the Belligerent nations? No—We say the bringing them to the United States and paying duties on them, neutralises the property. But do they? Indisputably not. The moment you concede the point that you cannot carry on a direct trade, it becomes a question no longer of principle—but a question on which you must treat on the ground of expediency. And you must treat—you will treat—relative to it. There is one consideration, which whether it has or has not engaged the attention of gentlemen, ought not to be lost sight of—and that is that our bulky productions can be carried by only two powers in the world—by ourselves or Great Britain—No other nation possesses the tonnage—Go then into war with Great Britain, and where will you find the tonnage to carry your products; you cannot find it. But, on the other hand, the British fabrics may be brought in Danish bottoms. There will be neutral tonnage enough to bring it to your doors the productions of Britain. But where will you find the neutral tonnage to carry your produce abroad?

Yesterday, Timothy Hanly received 16s. 3d. for saving Mary Malchahy from drowning at the slip at George's-quay, the circumstance having been fully proved to the satisfaction of the Committee of the Dispensary.

Mr. Flood observed, one night, in the Irish House of Commons, "that the wages of sin is death; but in this country (Ireland), added he, the wages of sin is a pension."

The Opposition squad are determined to go through the manual under the Training Bill.—They have, however, but faint hopes of changing their present quarters, or of being taken into pay.

It is said that the Scotch, in their late rejoicing for the acquittal of their countryman Lord Melville would not admit, at any of their feasts, either White Bread, or London Porter—they could, however, have no objection to Trotters, which will probably, become a favorite dish in Scotland.
