CRIM. CON.

The plaintiff, John Henry, of Richardstown, Esq. the Reverend — Murphy, Vicar of Stabannon, defendant.

The action in this cause, came to be tried, on Thursday evening, at the Assizes of Dundalk, before the Hon. Justice Fox, and a Special Jury, composed of Gentlemen of the first respectability in the Co. of Louth—Sir Edward Bellew, Bart. Foreman. The damages were laid at 10,000l.

Mr. Dunn opened the case, on the part of the plaintiff, in an elaborate and feeling address to the Jury, and stated the enormity of the defendant's conduct, to his friend and benefactor, in the most pathetic terms, who, until the ill-fated period of the defendant's residence in his neighbourhood, enjoyed every domestic comfort and happiness; and, to add to his infamy, was himself a married man with a family of children. The learned counsel went at great length into a review of the base and turpitude of the defendant's mind, in degrading a respectable and worthy man of the affections of the partner of his cares and the mother of his children. We regret not being able to follow the learned and eloquent counsel through his most admirable speech.

Several respectable witnesses proved that Mr. and Mrs. Henry, prior to the defendant's intercourse in his house, lived on terms of mutual love and affection.

Other witnesses were produced, who deposed that they frequently saw the defendant take unwarrantable liberties with Mrs. Henry, inconsistent with, and degrading to the character of a virtuous woman, and that the defendant, in the absence of Mr. Henry, frequently visited her at unseasonable hours.

The evidence given by the above witnesses, was nearly conclusive of a criminal connexion between
