Gent. now no longer learned, since he had sacrificed his profession, and become a martyr to the duty of his Sovereign, is afraid that the Catholics will wash their hands in Protestant blood, he has none but himself to blame for the consequences.

While Lord Howick's party were in the Lobby, his Lordship addressed them nearly in the following manner:—"Gentlemen, before we separate this morning, I have a few words to say: It is extremely probable that the motion of my Hon. Friend (Mr. Brand) will be carried by a majority; but a threat has been held out by his Majesty's Ministers of a Dissolution of Parliament. In the event of such a threat being attempted to be executed, it will be expedient to meet it by the adoption of a Resolution, or an Address to the Throne. (Hear! hear! hear!)—Gentlemen, I have no hesitation in saying, that such a threat is unparalleled in the annals of Parliament."—(Hear, hear.)

After the division had been announced, as above, the House adjourned at seven o'clock this morning—(Friday.)

LIMERICK, APRIL 17.

By the Chester Mail which arrived at our office last night, we received the following intelligence:

SUNDAY—LONDON, APRIL 12.

OBSERVER-OFFICE, 3 o'Clock.

CAPTURE of MONTE VIDEO from the SPANIARDS.

At 6 o'clock this morning, Major Tucker, of the 72d Regt. arrived in town with the important intelligence of the capture of the town and fort of Monte Video, by the British troops under the command of Brigadier-General Sir Samuel Auchmuty, on the 3d of February.

The place was taken by assault. Our loss, in killed and wounded, amounted to 531 men; that of the Spaniards to upwards of 1500.

We have to lament the loss of many brave officers, particularly Lieut. Col. Brownrigg, Lieut. Colonel Vassal, with about 8 others.

The Spaniards defended themselves with great obstinacy, and were led on by the Marquis DeSobremont, Viceroy, and Don Pasquel Hudebro, the Governor of Monte Video.

Our force consisted of the 17th, 20th, and 21st Light Dragoons; the 38th, 40th, 47th, 87th, and 95th regiments.

The Spanish force comprised 5000 men, independent of a force of 8000 in reserve, under the command of the French tenegado, Colonel Linniers.

The Grenadiers under Major Tucker, the Light Battalion, headed by Major Campbell, of the 40th, the Rifle Corps, and the 38th Regt, particularly distinguished themselves, and led the storm.

The Forlorn was led on by Lieutenant Everard, of the Queen's 2d Regiment.

The troops landed on the 16th January, at Carratas Bay, about nine miles to the Eastward of Monte Video.—On the 30th January the siege commenced; and on the 3d February the assault was made, in consequence of the approach of Linniers.

The Sailors and Marines, who co-operated in this glorious service, were under the command of Captain Donnelly, of the Ardent, Captain Honeyman, of the Leda, and Captain Chamberlain at Scilla Castle in Sicily.—on the famous straight which bears that name, and which forms the nearest point of contact to the Continent of Italy.

"Regnier was, at that time, commander-in-chief of the French forces—their head-quarters at Mount Leon in Lower Calabria, and at the city of Naples. The British force was in the following distribution: the flank battalion of the Guards and 78th regt. at Syracuse, the remainder of the Guards in Catania—the two battalions of the 35th, the 61st, 62d, Watteville's, and the Chasseurs Britannique, in Messina—the first battalion of the 27th, is quartered along the coast—the second bat. of the 27th, in the interior,—the remainder of the British force at Melatza and the villages in the neighbourhood.—Telegraphs are erected all along the coast from Syracuse to Melatza. The weather was then very cold for that climate, but the troops perfectly healthy, in high discipline, and anxious to uphold their country's fame. At the time the letter bears date, an account reached Sicily of Buonaparte's success against Prussia, but the checks or defeats sustained from Russian efforts did not occur, yet the spirit of our troops and the Sicilian loyalists was not, even under such circumstances, damped; they only looked for, and hoped, that war would be declared between Russia and the Porte, whereby a new and vigorous exertion may be consigned to their courage."

We have it from the highest authority, that no one is as yet appointed to succeed the present Lord Chancellor of Ireland, on the Bench: although it is generally understood that Baron Sutton is the person intended for that high office.

A meeting of the Catholics is to be held to-morrow, in the great room of the Retunda, Dublin, for the purpose of determining, we understand, the line of conduct to be pursued in consequence of the late political alterations that have occurred. Even. Herald.

It not unfrequently happens that, in our pursuit of Fortune, we relax when she is on the very threshold of her Temple, to reward a perseverance in devotion. Quere—May not this prove a hint of importance to some, who, having hitherto proved unsuccessful in Lottery Adventure, have thoughts of relinquishing the pursuit, at the critical moment when a Scheme is about to be determined, which contains four Capital Prizes of £20,000—four of £10,000—and four of £5,000, besides many other Prizes of very considerable consequence.
