A FASHIONABLE PARTY,

At the Frescati in Paris.

First Lady.—In a round dress of Italian crape, of a bright lemon colour, over a white sarsnet slip. A short full sleeve, and round bosom, cut low, with a tucker of French net.—Conversation bonnet of chip, ornamented with lilac ribband. Hair curled on the forehead; and in ringlets on the shoulders.

Second Lady.—A round dress of plain India mull muslin; with long waist, full sleeve, and frock back. A deep fall of Mechlin lace quite round the bosom. A short sash, of bright morone tied behind. A turban hat, of morone, satin, shaded in checks, and ornamented with field flowers in front. Necklace and ear-rings of mocho stone linked with gold. Hair cropt close behind, and in dishevelled curls in front.—Long Angola shawl, of a bright amber colour, with a rich and variegated border. White kid gloves, and shoes of morone kid.

GENTLEMEN'S DRESSES.

A Morning Walking Dress for Gentlemen—is composed of a dark brown mixed coat, lappelled, with flat plated buttons, and collar of the same cloth; or greenish mixtures lappelled, flat plated buttons, and collar of cloth; and the coat must be buttoned close up. Striped toilet, or plain kerseymere waistcoats, single breasted, and bound with silk; and drab-coloured kerseymere pantaloons, with Hessian boots.

Evening Full Dress for Gentlemen—consists of a blue coat, lappelled, flat gilt buttons, and black velvet collar—a dark green coat, lappelled, flat gilt buttons, and black velvet collar—or, a dark olive brown coat lappelled, covered buttons, and collar of the same cloth. These three are literally the only coats that are worn at present, and have generally the two or three bottom buttons buttoned. Waistcoats of fine white Marseilles quilting, single-breasted—drab kerseymere breeches, with silk strings at the knee. Snow white narrow ribbed stockings, with strings in the shoes.

General Observations on Gentlemen's Dresses, for May.

Evening coats, which we have already described, are generally of blue, dark-green, or dark olive-brown; the two former have a gilt button, and most generally a black velvet collar. The morning coats are mostly of dark mixtures, and are, in general, made double-breasted; but the single breasted coat is considered the most fashionable, and will undoubtedly shew its preponderance in a very short time.—Drab colour milled kerseymere breeches or pantaloons, with Hessian or brown top boots, are constantly worn.

MARRIAGE OF MARY CASEY.

IN consequence of an advertisement which appeared lately in a Limerick paper, relative to the marriage of Michael Casey, Mary Clanchy (to which name she once had the misfortune to add that of Casey) feels herself called upon to make her humble appeal to the public—she does so, and leaves it to the impartiality of that public, to judge and consider whether Michael Casey's assertions have been built on falsehood or truth—whether he has not with too much effrontery dared to insult society, and impose on the public mind—and whether in fine, the following proofs of her marriage, of which she holds the original, give her not just title to contradict his foul and outrageous calumnies, and though to her sorrow, yet thus publicly in the face of the world to avow, that she is the lawful but much injured wife of an ungenerous husband, named Michael Casey.

“It is indubitably certain both from the Registry of this Parish, and the testimony of creditable witnesses, now living in said Parish, that on the 19th of November, 1799, Michael Casey, a private in the Limerick Fencibles, and Mary Clanchy from Limerick, also, but then living in this town with her brother—were married according to the rights and ceremonies of the Catholic Church by the Rev. Wm. Keating, then assistant Priest in the Parish of Lismore. Dated at Lismore this 27th day of April, 1807.

“MAURICE COLEMAN, P. P. of Lismore.”

“Mary Clanchy was considered by her acquaintances here as a discreet well-behaved girl, and Mich Casey then a prudent lad, never seen drunk while in Lismore. M. COLEMAN.”
