and at the same time combining eley: a platform being erected on the heeled carriage, the chains were fe-sibly ornamented, and united by fes-the whole surrounded with a profusches. After this vehicle had been e principal parts of Ennis, the Mem-

, the body of a man was discovered r near the weir, Cork.—It appeared at least three weeks in the water.
r. one of the Coroners, held an In-re verdict was accidental death. No imed the deceased, he was decently in's Church yard. He wore a light with a white velvet cape and small dark brown body coat, with large old corduroy small clothes, patched annel jacket, and no waistcoat, grey d his shoes tied with twine.

would be unfavourable. This was a matter which appears not to have been anticipated; for altho' the Constituents were divided in their sense of parties, and a contest was predetermined yet no person was provided as a substitute for Mr. Car-rew; and considerable efforts and exertions were made to procure a Candidate almost upon any terms. It is difficult to say whether or not the whole Kingdom of Ireland produced a fit person to supply Mr. Carew's secession; but it looks as if the home-stock of Candidates was not in much repute, when it was necessary to set up the Right Hon. Richard Brinsley Sheridan;—and however comical it may appear, the ingenious and accomplished member for Ilchester and Candidate for Westminster, &c. &c. is absolutely at this moment, probably without his own knowledge, a Candidate for Wexford!

Considering that the embarrassment of wanting a Candidate is rather a discouraging circumstance, yet it did not seem to oppress the spirits of the Electors, for Mr. Sheridan's name was announced to as jocular a Hustings as the County of Wexford ever saw. At the close of the Poll this day, the numbers were—Mr. Alcock 50,—Col. Ram-51,—Mr. Colclough 44,—Mr. R. B. Sheridan, 40.

To THE MEMORY OF OTWAY TOLER, Esq. brother to the Rt. Hon. Lord Norbury, and to the deceased Dan. Toler, Esq. Representative of the Co. Tipperary.

Of cheerful temper, and of courteous mien,
In friendship ardent, and in mind serene; Esteemed by all, beloved as soon as known;
The happiness of others formed his own.
He, to his sufferings scarcely gave a sigh, But taught us how to live, and to die!
Such TOLER was—(tho' ling'ring pain oppress) With resignation seated in his breast He fled from Earth; and left us to regret, That Heaven decreed his sun so soon to set!

The above mentioned Gentleman was released from a tedious illness on Saturday the 23d inst. at the house of his nephew, the Hon. H. J. Graham Toler, Rutland-square, Dublin, and on Monday 24th inst. his remains was attended to Mary's Church, by a set of respectable and disconsolate friends.
