We have authority for contradicting an account in our last Publication, copied from a respectable Dublin Print, which stated the death of the mother of the Rt.
Hon. General the Earl of Conyngham;—and we have particular pleasure in being able to declare, that the report originated in mistake, and through the medium of the Chronicle, do away that uneasiness which must have been experienced by her most distinguished and honorable family and connexions.

Saturday morning, the mills of Mr. Daniel, of Portlaw, were entirely destroyed by accidental fire. No lives were lost, and the premises were fully insured.

We have to dread the consequences which may have arisen on our sea coast, if the same storm has been experienced as we were visited with last night—a more violent gale, attended with heavy rain, has not been experienced last winter; the wind had not abated when this Chronicle was put to press.
