

evening, at 5 o'clock, arrived at the seat of Thomas Locke, Esq. in this County, the Lady E. Somerset, sister to the Right Hon. Lord Courtenay:—Her entrance into Newcastle by a numerous and respectable company who should shew her most respect, from the town, the horses were taken from and amidst the plaudits and hurrahs of the was drawn to the Castle. The Yeomanry, on occasion, testified their attachment to the numerous volleys, and in the evening the was brilliantly illuminated.

Some time ago sent by Lord Courtenay to the Yeomanry, was on Thursday presented to the Lady E. Somerset, who addressed the Corps in an elegant speech. William Thomas Locke, head of this fine body of men, who were in the Castle-yard, returned their thanks for the conferred on them.

The Castle Corps of Cavalry, commanded by T. Locke, proceeded on Thursday to the County, at Abbeyfeale—they were accompanied by the High Sheriff, Col. O'Leah, one of the natives, and several other gentlemen of who congratulated his Grace and Duchess, the noble Visitors and Suite to the hospitable residence of William T. Locke, Castle, on their route from Ardferit Abbey, the Right Hon. the Earl of Glandore.

On the evening, at a quarter before six o'clock, the Duke and Duchess of Richmond and at Newcastle—the party consisted of their Countess of Glandore, Lady Mary Lennox, March, Sir Charles Vernon, Major Loftus, Lady, in four carriages, drawn each with a pair of horses—they were met about a mile on by several hundreds of the Tenantry of Lord Courtenay, who took the horses from the carriage, and drew it to the Castle.

The celebration was celebrated by a brilliant illumination—discharges of musquetry from the North and Yeomanry Corps, bonfires, ringing of bells, and other manifestation of joy for the honor of their illustrious visitors.

The guests sat down to a most sumptuous entertainment—amongst those invited to meet the Vice-Chancellor who were present at dinner, were the High Sheriff, Col. Odell, M. P.; C. D. Stephen Dickson, Esq. Gerald Blennerhassett and his Lady, Miss Fitz-Gerald, of Glin, Esq. Rev. Thomas Locke, Rev. William Blennerhassett, Esq. the Officers of the Regiment, &c. &c.

On the morning was presented yesterday morning by the Duke, Esq. to his Grace the Lord Lieutenant, Maurice Hickey, John McNamara, John L. Liff, who were to receive their third day in the Liberties of this City, for an hour, Mr. O'Brien's Steward, at Newcastle, and was pleased to remit the remainder of that sentence.
