chancel was robbed of the whole of the church ser- vice of plate, of considerable value. The difficulties and ingenuity required to get at the property, prove the villains to have been complete masters of their profession.

The plate carried off consists of a large waiter of singular workmanship, weighing 129 ounces; the back of a large bible and prayer book (silver), 200 ounces; two silver salvers, nearly 200 ounces; other waiters, and two large silver candlesticks, 330 ounces; 2 other candlesticks, 200 ounces; four flaggons, 400 ounces; two chalices, &c. 112 ounces; two smaller ditto, 30 do. These articles, or most of them, were used on Friday last at a private ordination by the Bishop of Lincoln; and after they were done with, they were locked up in the plate room, immediately over the vestry, in iron chests, which had on them padlocks, as well as other locks.

There were two doors to the room, an inner and an outer one; the former was entirely iron, the other plated, and of uncommon strength. To these principal doors there are several passages leading, all of which have doors always locked, through which persons must pass before they reach the plate rooms and it is only known to few persons to what apartment they lead. All these doors remained locked, and it was not until Sunday morning, when the place was wanted for the church service, that the robbery was discovered.—The person who had the plate under his care, opened the passage doors as usual, with the keys belonging to them, but the lock of the main door he could not open until he procured the master-key.
