all the material facts; and upon those facts only can a rational conclusion be founded. The other children of Earl Grosvenor, who had been vaccinated, were, in consequence of this alarm, subjected to various inoculation, and were found to have been secured from its effects by the previous vaccination.

A marked instance of the appearance of small-pox, twice in the same person, has occurred twice in the case of the Rev. Mr. Rowley, son of Lady Rowley.—About forty years ago, Mr. Rowley, then a child, was inoculated for the small pox, by Mr. Adair, surgeon-general; and had a considerable eruption. On the 5th of June last he was seized with fever, and eruption appeared on the third day; there were two hundred postules on the face, and the distemper has proved a severe case of distinct small-pox.

Another instance of small-pox after inoculation has happened to Miss S. Booth, of Covent Garden Theatre. At five years of age this young lady was inoculated for small pox. The progress of the arm was regular, she had considerable fever, and the whole of the appearances were of a nature to afford, it was believed, a perfect security from any future attack of the disease. On the 20th of June she was seized with febrile symptoms, which proved the precursor of small pox? on Sunday, the third day from the attack, postules appeared on the forehead and scalp. The eruption spread to other parts of the frame, accompanied with a sore throat. This eruption passed through the usual forms and stages of the disease, and constituted an undoubted case.
