the assembled multitude on their firmness, constancy, and unanimity, and by paying an highly finished and well merited compliment to the protestants of this country, for the uniform liberality zeal and activity, evinced by them in promoting the repeal of the penal laws. The speech was received with unbounded applause.

Mr. O'Gorman then moved the subsequent resolutions, which were seconded by Mr. Wolfe, of Tiermac-lane, in a neat and eloquent speech. When the resolutions were about to be put, Mr. O'Gorman rose and said, as he saw his learned friend, Counsellor O'Connell, at the meeting, he would feel happy that his construction of the act was sanctioned by the opinion of so able a lawyer as his learned friend was.

This brought up Mr. O'Connell, who in a most eloquent and luminous speech, sustained the opinions of Mr. O'Gorman.

Before the resolutions passed, Mr. Jas. O'Brien, of Castle-fergus, a protestant gentleman, of this county, addressed the meeting in a short but eloquent and comprehensive speech. He highly complimented both Mr. O'Gorman and Mr. O'Connell, and said, whatever may have been his doubts before he came to the meeting, of the illegality of the proclamation, none remained now in his mind, after the clear, able, and luminous statement of Mr. O'Gorman. He expressed his intention of at all times supporting the catholics in the prosecution of their just claims, and concluded a manly and interesting speech amidst peals of applause.

The resolutions were then put and carried unanimously, as follows:

Resolved, That the free and unfettered liberty of presenting petitions to the King, and to both Houses of Parliament, for the redress of grievances is as well the undoubted birth-right, as the most invaluable privilege of the subjects of this realm, sanctioned by the first principles of the constitution, and secured by the bill of rights.

Resolved, That petitions for the repeal of all laws that affect and degrade the catholics of Ireland, be presented to both Houses of Parliament, at an early period in the next session.

Resolved, That for the purpose of preparing and causing such petition to be presented in the manner most conducive to their success, the four following gentlemen, namely—Jas. O'Gorman, of Ennis, Dan. O'Connell, of Kilgory, Nich. Mahon, of the city of Dublin, and Francis M. Mahon, of Cahircalla, Esqrs. who were delegates in the year 1793, and also the six following gentlemen, namely—Wm. Butler, of Bunnahow, Mal. Canny, of Castle-Fergus, Stephen Wolfe, of Tiermac-lane, Pat. Mahon, of Newpark, Connell O'Connell, of Cappahard, and M. O'Loughlin, of Port, Esqrs. be requested to attend the general committee of the catholics of Ireland.

Resolved, That the late general committee of the catholics of Ireland, do deserve our cordial thanks for their zeal and activity in the catholic cause.

Resolved, That our most cordial thanks are due, and are hereby given to the Earl of Fingall, and the other members of the general committee, who attended the meeting in Dublin, on the 31st day of July last, for the dignified and constitutional spirit and determination displayed by them on that occasion.

Resolved, That our cordial thanks are due, and hereby returned to the protestants of this country, and to the protestant gentlemen who have attended this meeting, for their uniform zeal and activity in promoting the repeal of the penal laws.

Mr. O'Connell having quitted the chair, and William Butler, of Bunnahow, Esq. being called thereto, the thanks of the meeting were voted to Mr. O'Connell, for his proper and dignified conduct in the chair.

Before the meeting dispersed, Mr. Macnamara, of Doolen, begged to put a question to the gentlemen who had been appointed to attend in Dublin, namely to ascertain whether they would or would not accept the honourable office assigned to them?

On which Mr. Butler, of Bunnahow, immediately stepped forward and said, "For my own part, there is no personal risk that I am not willing to incur—there is no sacrifice, either of liberty or property, that I am not willing to make for the common cause."

Mr. Mahon also said, "I subscribe to the opinion and declaration of my friend, Mr. Butler—I am will-

The evidence in this case was, necessarily, of such a description as to preclude its appearance in the columns of a newspaper. The jury brought in a verdict of acquittal, and the prisoner was discharged.

ARMACH ASSIZERS.

The following trials took place here:—
Hugh Barrett alias Biers, for feloniously uttering and publishing as true, a forged note of the Belfast Bank of Messrs. Gordon, Batt, Houston, and Crawford Guilty—to be hanged on Tuesday the 20th August.

Timothy Bell, for feloniously publishing as true, a note of the bank of Messrs. Gordon, Batt, Houston, and Crawford, which had been feloniously altered from two pounds to ten; and also, for publishing as true, a note of the bank of Messrs. Montgomery, Hamilton, Orr, and Sloan, which had been altered from one pound to two. Guilty—to be hanged same day as Barrett.

Loughlin Kennan, for falsely pretending and affirming that one John M. Farlan was a deserter, and thereby obtaining from Leonard Dobbin, Esq. the pro-collector, the sum of one pound. Guilty—to be transported for seven years.

George Tipping indicted for feloniously disposing of a bank note of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland. The witness against him was W. Steenson, an approver, who had been employed by Tipping to circulate the note for him, and on the table he contradicted every fact sworn to in his information. Tipping was consequently acquitted, and a bill of indictment sent up against Steenson, on which he was convicted and sentenced to be pillored, and then to be transported for seven years.
