And where the silent dead remain,
2Tis thine to threat the dread domain,
And warm beyond the tomb.

But Mercy, birth of hallow'd love.

Still stands before the Throne above,

And shades the seat divine;

If Mercy guides the rising sun,

If Mercy rules the waning moon,

Then when the goal of Heav'n is wob,

And all the race of orbits run,

And the vast work of Mercy done,

Stranger—it must be thine.

On Friday evening, Mr. John Foy, publican, of Hammond's Marsh, expired suddenly on the Custom-house, quay, Cork. He was an honest, industrious man, and was a permanent serjeant in the Royal Cork Volunteers. He has left a widow and three young children to lament his transitory exit. His remains were interred with military honours.

One of these casualties so common to fails in every part of the world, occurred on Monday evening at our prison in this town. Between six and seven o'clock, as it was quite dark before the moon rose, two prisoners, Michael M Carthy and Terence O'Brien, having concealed themselves in a convenient place, and sawed out the bars of one of the windows in the upper story of the jall on the north angle, received a strong rope by the assistance of a small cord, from some persons in the gardens adjoining. Upon this rope M Carthy slided from the window, and made his escape; but as O'Brien was descending by the same means, he struck against the yard wall, and fell into the yard, and dislocated his ancles. The centinels bearing the noise, proceeded to the spot, and found him -but the other has not yet been heard of. M Carthy was under a charge of horse stealing-the other for so trifling an offence that he expected to be bailed out in a day or two. The jailer had been on the King's business in Dublin some days before, and 'arrived here yesterday morning .- Clonmel Advertiser. the sousered orders

A Proclamation.

RICHMOND, &c.

HEREAS it appears to us. by the Inquest of the Coroner of the county of Sligo, taken on Saturday the 2d day of November instant, on the body of Patrick Moorhead, of Gurteen, in the said county, constable, that the said Patrick Moorhead was found murdered on the lands of Gurteen, on the high road, in the half barony of Coolavan, and county of Sligo atoresaid, by his head being broke by stones, by some evil-minded person or persons at present anknown:

And whereas it appears to us probable, from information upon eath which we have received, that the said Patrick Moorhead was murdered in consequence of having performed his duty as a constable:

being determined, as far as in us lies, to bring the perpetrator or perpetrators of the said inhuman murder to speedy and condign punishment, do by this our proclamation publish and declare, that if any person or persons shall, within the space of six calendar months next after the date hereof, discover the person or persons concerned in the said murder, so as that he, she, or they be apprehended and convicted thereof, such person or persons so discovering shall receive as a reward the sum of One Hundred Pounds for each and every of the first three persons who shall be discovered, aprehended, and convicted of the said murder.

And we do hereby publish and declare, that if any person or persons concerned in the said murder, (the erson or persons who actually committed the same only excepted), shall, within the time aforesaid, discover his, her, or their accomplice or accomplices, so as that he, she, or they be apprehended and convicted thereof, such person or persons shall not only receive the said reward, but shall also receive his majesty's most gracious and free pardon for the said murder.

And we do hereby strictly charge and command all justices of the peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and all other his Majesty's loving subjects, to use their utmost endeavours to bring the said offenders, and every of them to speedy and condign punishment.

Given at the Council Chamber in Dublin, the 28th day of November, 1811.
