So severe were the gales of wind in the North Seas, that in the course of the three autumnal months, eleven out of eighteen prizes, captured by the Tartar frigate, foundered on their way to England, and all their crews perished.
Amongst the remote Orkneys, seven Danish ships, with rich cargoes, protected by British licences, are reported in private letters, to have suffered complete wreck on that dangerous winter coast.
It is asserted on the authority of a letter from Paris, but without a date, nor is it known to whom it is communicated, that Joseph Bonaparte is to be removed from the throne of Spain, and to assume that of Poland!
Tuesday Mr. Williams, from the Bank of Ireland, attended at the Stock Exchange, and announced that the Directors had agreed to recommend a dividend to the proprietors of three and three quarters per cent. for the six months ending the 25th inst. and also a bonus of two and a half per cent.
At one o'clock on Tuesday morning, a fire was discovered in the provision stores of Thos. Dunscombe, Esq. Morrison's island, Cork, which would have done considerable damage, but for the timely exertions of a few respectable inhabitants, who succeeded in getting it under.
The trial of John Magee, Esq. Proprietor of The Dublin Evening Post, which was to have come on last Tuesday in the Court of King's Bench, for an alleged libel on the Police establishment of Dublin, was put off until next Term, at the instigation of the prosecutors, they paying all the costs already attendant on the suit.

From the Dublin Correspondent.
It is with sentiments of unfeigned satisfaction that we feel ourselves enabled to announce to the Irish public, upon unquestionable authority, that the feelings which pervade the Royal Family, are decisively and determinedly in unison with those of every enlightened friend of the British empire, relative to the great question of Catholic Emancipation. The intelligence of the acquittal of Doctor Sheridan has diffused universal satisfaction throughout the sister country, a circumstance of the highest importance to the happiness and prosperity of the empire. The news was announced at Portsmouth in the presence of his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, who expressed himself highly gratified by the event, and took the opportunity of declaring his disapprobation of the measures resorted to against the catholic holy. The Prince stated that he spoke the sense of his family, in professing himself the steadfast friend of catholic emancipation, and that, as the only obstacle, which had existed to prevent that measure was removed, (we presume our readers will conclude with us that those obstacles were of a filial nature) the next sessions of Parliament, every one of the Royal Dukes (with the exception of the Duke of Cumberland) would vote in favor of the catholic petition.
We may consider this as the first unequivocal intimation of the Regent's intentions, with respect to this most important of all subjects. As such, we cannot avoid considering it, when we recollect the intimate political connection, which has always subsisted between the Royal brothers. We, therefore, take the earliest opportunity to congratulate our catholic fellow-subjects upon intelligence so favorable to their cause, and upon the truth of which, from the quarter from whence it has been received, we place the most implicit reliance.
In the mean time, they will allow us to recommend to them undeviating perseverance in that course of moderation, which they have hitherto pursued, and which must ultimately conduct them to the object of their legitimate wishes, a free, unreserved, and unrestricted admission into the bosom of the only free constitution in Europe. They will prove themselves worthy of the character of freemen, by their behaviour, which is the noblest, as well as the most effectual way of refuting the calumnies of their enemies, and removing any prejudices that may still linger even in liberal minds against their cause. Their cause is the cause of Ireland, and we know that it is for that reason chiefly that they cherish it. The love of our country, when genuine, will always lead us to promote its welfare, which so materially depends upon peace and tranquillity, the best and most precious fruits of a government founded on the basis of the affections of the people.

Loss of the Saldanha Frigate and Talbot Sloop of War.
It is with the most painful concern we lay before our readers the following letter, received in Dublin on Monday from Londonderry:
"Derry, Saturday evening, Dec. 7.
Str—On Saturday the 30th ult, the Saldanha frigate, in company with the Talbot sloop of war, sailed on a cruise to the westward from their station at Loughswilly. Early on Wednesday the 4th inst. it blew a gale of wind, which increased until evening, when it blew a violent storm. From the knowledge that these vessels were off the coast, and the wind N. W. blowing directly upon it, much apprehension was entertained.—Thursday passed over, without any information, but on Friday morning some persons came up from Loughswilly, and stated that several pieces of wreck were found upon the coast, with the mark of Saldanha on the timber. This excited great anxiety, but this evening produced certain information of the total loss of the ship, accompanied with the distressing information that the Talbot had shared the same fate, both on shore—and both mere wrecks, without a single soul having escaped.
"This night an express has arrived which states that upwards of two hundred deadbodies had been cast on shore, among which was that of Capt. Pakenham, who was buried this day. You may judge of the distress that so calamitous a circumstance has produced here. The bay that they were drove into is called Ballymastaker, and is at the entrance of Loughswilly.—The Saldanha was a fine frigate, of 38 guns, commanded by the Hon. Captain Pakenham. The Talbot carried 19 guns, and was commanded by the Hon. Capt. Jones.
We feel much pleasure in contradicting part of the above melancholy account, given in the Correspondent, and congratulating the friends of Captain Jones, on his very fortunate escape, as we understand he was advanced from the command of the Talbot some short time previous to her sailing from Cork—he was succeeded in the command of that vessel by Capt. Swaine.

NOTTINGHAM.—The latest accounts from Nottingham are more alarming than ever with respect to the riots; which have risen to such a pitch, that it is the determination of Govt. to use vigorous measures in suppressing them. On Friday a deputation of manufacturers arrived in London, to make representations to Government on this subject; in consequence of which, Mr. Conant, the Magistrate, and several Police Officers, have been sent to Nottingham, and an additional military force has been ordered to that neighbourhood.
HORRID MURDERS.—We much doubt whether, in the annals of murders, there is an instance on record, to equal in atrocity, those which the following particulars will disclose:—
About 12 o'clock on Saturday night, Mr. Marr, who kept a Lace and Pelisse Warehouse, at 29, Ratcliffe Highway, London, sent out his female servant to purchase some oysters, whilst he was shutting up the shop window; on her return, in about a quarter of an hour, she rung the bell repeatedly, without any person coming to the door. This alarmed her, and she communicated her fears to Mr. Parker, the adjoining neighbour, who obtained admission by the back way; and on entering the warehouse he beheld a spectacle which so petrified him with horror, that it was with difficulty he could make known the sad catastrophe which had befallen the whole of this unfortunate family. Mr. Marr was found lying near the window, dead, with his skull broken. His wife, who, it was seen, had come to his relief, from below stairs, on hearing a scuffle, had been met by the villains at the top of the stairs, where she was found, deprived of life. Her head was so much mangled, as to be beyond description. The shop-boy, from all appearance, had made more resistance than the rest, or they had not made so sure a blow, for the counter, which extended the whole length of the warehouse, was found bespattered with his blood and brains, from one end of it to the other, and the body of the unfortunate youth lying prostrate on the floor, weltering in its gore—nor did the work of the blood-thirsty villains stop here: their last victim in the house was an infant in the cradle, about four months old, and even it found no protection in its innocence or incapability to impeach the wretches. They cut its throat from ear to ear in that state it was found.
