" A respectable Merchant who arrived here this morning from Hamburg, along with a Merchant of that City, states, that they left Hamburg on Wednesday morning There were then 5000 French troops in the town, under the command of Marshal Davoust and General Vandamme.

" These troops were mostly wretched looking soldiers.

" It was reported and credited on Wednesday morning at Hamburg, that a corps of 20,000 men, under Marshal Victor (the Duke of Belluno), which had been detached from the Grand Army, had been cut off by the Allies, supported by the Levy en Masse, on the 17th ult. and completely routed.

" The letters from Berlin, of the 29th ult. are very satisfactory, and such was the confidence entertained there of success of the Allies, that orders were sent to Heligoland for large supplies of Colonial produce and British Manufactures "

It is said to be stated by Ministers, that the Pre-he should confine his dominions within the limits of
