

1814, 00,000 valiant and disciplined warriors with in readiness to conquer the peace of the World.

The following is a letter from a British in Lord Welington's Army, dated St. Jean de Luz, Dec. 22, and it will be read with much interest.

Of late we have been creeping on; but the enemy has most obstinately contested the ground, and we have lost so many men in killed and wounded, that if we are expected to go on, you must send us a large slice of the Militia. If, however, we have suffered somewhat in the late series of actions, the enemy have suffered more severely—they confess being 14,000 men hors de combat in four days.

The centre has had little to do, the brunt fell on the right. If Sir John Hope could have added to his force, it would have been in the command of the left of the army, but he exposes himself extremely; he had three shots thro' his hat, and received a ball in his knee.
Sir Rowland Hill had likewise most narrow escapes.— His Portuguese troops outdid their former brilliant deeds the number of Frenchmen they killed, lay thick on the ground, than on any battle since Albuera.
We expect to hear of Sir John and Sir Rowland receiving additional honors from home.

A length 10,000 of the most regular Spaniards are coming up; it is hoped they may be prevented from desolating the country and destroying the poor inhabitants, who continue in numbers to come to the English for protection. An honest Mayor of one of the villages in our possession, wrote some time ago to his friend at Bayonne, expressing his surprise at the good and orderly conduct of the English, extolling them and recommending to his friend and family to return to their home.— When he heard of this he imprisoned the friend who had indiscreetly shewed the letter about Bayonne, and in a Proclamation denounced the Mayor as a traitor to his country and the Emperor; so that when we go we must take the Mayor with us.

Considerable numbers of the old French troops continue to come into us—on the day of the action with Sir Rowland, 3000 Conscripts made off in a body, and went to their homes. Since the Brigade deserted to us, Soult has sent to the rear, or disarmed all the Germans, Poles Dutch and Swiss, in his Army.

All accounts from the interior agree in stating, that they are making extraordinary exertions, and that a very formidable army is forming to oppose us. Lord Wel-ington has not brought forward again any of the Spanish cross the Biddassoa. He is fortifying our front in the strongest manner—making batteries and every kind of field work, and taking up the iron guns which we captured on the 10th Nov.

Sir Thomas Biron has come, to the great joy of all the army. He goes to command his old invincible division—and it is said he has declined the command of the ill-fated army of Catalonia. Suchet still continues to cooperate with the military movement of any consequence has taken place. Within the last four days the French have manifested a disposition to disturb Sir Rowland's division, which they hoped to take in flank and cut off the navigation of the river Adour, but having failed in both attempts, they retreated with haste to their entrenchments.

A Gentleman, who has been in the period of his departure so satisfied with the conduct of the people in political affairs, that he has written a paper of the real state of the country, and of the partial defections, and of the conduct of the troops, but that General Molitor many others.—We have seen a letter respecting the sign David Holmes, of this City, his brother Officers (the 9th Regt.) express in the handsomest terms their regard for him, and although he received a wound in the right hand, between the hand and little finger, yet they hope that in a month he will be able to write to his friends.—The number of young Gentlemen from this city and vicinity serving with the British Army in France, causes an increased interest in dispatches from thence, and we are glad to find, that letters respecting their safety have been this week received from several of them by their parents and friends.

The following tribute to the memory of the distinguished Lieut. Colonel Lloyd, of the 4th, is contained in a Letter received last night, from Major O'Halloran, of the 4th foot, dated Mart, (near Bayonne,) Dec. 15th:—

"I have one moment to spare, my pen cannot be better employed than in giving you a very high and distinguished character my friend Colonel Lloyd, bore in our division, he was adored by his Regt. and admired by all for his soldier-like and gentlemanly conduct. He was killed commanding our Brigade, and I am certain there never fell a braver fellow, he was interred with all possible respect."

We have a Letter from an Officer and Helvoetsluys, December 23, which states, that one of the Transports grounded the day preceding on a sandbank, and was considered for some time as lost, but got off, and every soul saved.—The 3d, 55th, and 69th, with detachments of Artillery landed, and were to proceed on the 24th to Wilmstadt, and thence for Bergen-op-zoom, where the army was to be concentrated.—General Graham took command and finally attack Antwerp, which seems to be the main object; he has Generals Gibbs, Cook, Mackenzie, &c. with the forces.

Surgeon Hogan and Jeremiah O'Mullivan, Esq. both of this City, were in the Atalantelop of war, Captain Hickey, when she struck on the 5th Nov. last, on the ridge of rocks, called the Blind Sisters, about 2 leagues from Halifax, North America, there were 137 on board, she went to pieces in 12 minutes, and yet every person, some on boat asks, spars, &c. providentially escaped, though with the loss of every thing but life.—The Captain is much applauded for his humanity and attention, even in the most trying crisis of the unfortunate event.

The 37th and 56th Regiments have marched from the Hague for Delft, and so proceed to join the rest of the British force in Zealand.

Lieutenant Anthony Keogh, of the 24th regiment, has been found guilty, by a Court-martial, at Halifax, of being drunk, when on the guard in charge of prisoners at Melville Island, and has been cashiered.
