about four miles from Thurles, and compelled him to give them a gun which he had for his protection, and regularly registered in consequence of an attack made upon him about three years back After taking Kinsella's gun, the party next proceeded to the house of Edmund Burke, Esq. of Roredstown, about two fields distant, and five of them walking into the house, called for the arms, which consisting of a gun and blunderbuss, were delivered to them. They then compelled Mr. Burke, who was in bed, to get up, and give them a powder-horn, which was locked up in his desk, and of which they seemed to be well aware, and then left the house On the same night, about half past ten, an armed party supposed to be same entered Mr. Fogarty's orchard-house at Ballinlonet; about a mile from Mr Burke's, and robbed the orchardmen of a case of pistols Mr Fogarty had given him to protect the fruit; and in about an hour after, Mr. Fogarty's dwelling house was attached.

☞ WATSON & MAHONY having been under the necessity of calling upon their numerous Subscribers and others for the Payment of their Accounts, in order to meet the Expences of a heavy Establishment; beg leave to return their sincere thanks to those Friends who have kindly settled their Debts; but not having received even a reply from other Persons, they regret that they will be unavoidably obliged to have Proceedings taken against those who have let their Accounts remain for Years undischarged.
