grande is, that the troops will have little ions from the French, are so frequent and evident the disaffection towards Bonaparte army. He has been obliged to withdraw his troops from this neighbourhood, in prevalence of desertions. Several have g, both cavalry and infantry - the former equipped. At Conde, which is one of es to us, they dare not open the gates, as d escape would come over to us; nor ntinel or a vidette, as the moment he is is off to us. It is well known here, that he interior of France is anxiously looked itants. We put the enemy into a great Sir Henry Clinton, who commands here, , and collected about four thousand men; y near the French lines; and, when so erceived in motion, they thought we were ack; and we understand they telegraphed is the first Charter granted to any such mercantile body in Ireland, and by being thus legalized, this highly respectable association will be enabled to render still more effectual protection and encouragement to the trade and commerce of this city already so much indebted to their exertions

We understand that through the vigilance of John Browne, Esq. Inspector of Stamp Duties for the Province of Munster, that a number of persons have been convicted before Thomas Philips Vokes Esq a Magistrate of this county, for having issued small notes, or undertakings in writings contrary to the 45th of the King.

ATTACK ON THE MAIL COACH.

The Coach for Dublin, by Cashel, which left Cork last Wednesday, at 2 o'clock, was attacked between Cahir and Cashel by a set of villains, who, with a cowardice inseparable from treachery, fired seven shots from behind the hedges, and so far succeeded in their diabolical design, as to wound the coachman, who received two slugs in his head, but who, notwithstanding, drove on the coach to Cashel, where he was relieved, and we are glad to state is not considered in any serious danger. On the spot where the at ack was made, the road was impeded by cars and trunks of trees, placed across, which in order to enable the coach to pass, were obliged to be removed by the guards, after they had succeeded in making the villains fly, by discharging their arms in the direction the shots proceeded from. We learn that an active search was immediately commenced by the police, when intimation of the outrage reached Cashel, and we sincerely trust it will prove successful .- Cork S. Reporter
