The King, v. Connors.

Jas. Connors was capitally indicted for having feloniously assaulted the dwelling house of Captain Vereker, in the North Liberties of this City, on the 8th of September last, between three and four o'clock in the morning. the prisoner, being habited in the dress or badge of a Whiteboy, and having a whiteshirt outside his clothes.—At the outer gate of the court yard next the dwelling house, he demanded the Captains fire-arms, and menaced him with death in the event of non-compliance, to which the Captain, however, replied, by threatening instantly to blow out the brains of the assailant, if he advanced, which had the effect of saving the adventurous prisoner's life from the capital part of the offence.

The Lord Chief Baron observed, that the dwelling house was not proved to have been assaulted or broken in any manner, as the Act required, on which the Solicitor General most frankly gave up the case of felony, but adduced proof of the count for a misdemeanor, upon which the prisoner was immediately pronounced guilty.

The learned Serjeant (Johnson) then pronounced sentence on the prisoner very emphatically, observing that nothing could be more singularly critical than the prisoner's acquittal from the capital part of the charge, which was owing to the promptitude of the prosecutor Captain Vereker when assailed; but as all the features of evil disposition and meditated crime were visible in the conduct of the prisoner, it was now necessary under the Act of Parliament to inflict on him an exemplary sentence to the full extent of the law, by fine, imprisonment and corporal punishment, as a salutary warning to him and others. The sentence of the Court was, that the prisoner be imprisoned for one year, and in that interval to be three times whipped, and at the end of that term to find sureties for keeping the peace—himself in the sum of fifty pounds and two others in twenty five pounds each—Days of punishment—Thursday next—the first Saturday in February—and the first Saturday in May.

The Lord Chief Baron announced to the Grand Jury, the order to the Solicitor from Government, for ordering the present Special Commission to stand adjourned to the 30th of December next, and, of course his Lordship discharged them till that day, and in case of their then attendance being necessary, the Sheriff is to give them reasonable notice.

Mr. Solicitor General then begged leave to add, that he wished to take his farewell of this county, and city, for the present, by repeating to them his great gratification at finding that at no time or place, within his knowledge, experience, or information, had there been manifested a more satisfactory termination of such a commission—(every trial having met the highest satisfaction in the minds of all parties concerned, as well as public hearers), or on which a greater punctuality and willingness was manifested of discharging their duty, than on the present occasion, except in the single instance of the infamous Condon, transported for perjury—this he stated in the firm belief and hope of the happy effects of this co-operation, in supporting peace and justice—he then took his leave and departed.

The Special Commission was in due form adjourned to the 30th of December next.

In our last Number we omitted to take notice of Messrs. Lloyd, Penefather and Keler, when we were detailing the strength of the crown bar, and the energy with which the Government supported the prosecution of offences against the peace of this county and city; but those gentlemen being members of our circuit bar, are too well known here, to require illustration—neither did we take notice of a person who formed a most important feature of this commission—the Crown Solicitor Mr. BARRINGTON.—Indeed, after the tribute paid in open court by the Solicitor General to his diligence, his integrity, his ability, and his zeal, any thing from us would be presuming, and perhaps only tend to weaken the impression made in that respect on the public mind, by the person best able to estimate his qualities—the second law officer of the crown.

In a report, current in the political circles, states, that a Noble Lord, hitherto highest in the personal favour and confidence of an illustrious personage, has been dismissed from his person and councils, in consequence of some indiscreet expressions respecting the liberality shewn by the personage in question in the treatment of a great prisoner confined to British custody.—An explanation is said to have been offered and to have been heard without effect.—A high office, not of a political nature, would naturally become vacant if this report was true; but we have not yet heard of any such vacancy.—Pilot.

Thursday last, Colonel Hawker, and a detachment of the 29th light dragoons, landed at Gosport, from Sicily.

the employment of the revenue, and station at Skerries, together with a son of Smith's, and Mr Coghlan, a tambour manufacturer, whose occupation on land renders his exertions doubly meritorious, arrived. Smith had been in the morning to visit the vessel, and had returned to Skerries (a distance of six miles) to collect his crew, determined to brave all hazards. We have the satisfaction to state that their exertions were successful, and that after the most laborious efforts and imminent hazard of their lives, they brought the six famished hands on shore all of whom were hospitably and kindly received, and were restored to life at the house of Mr. Filgat, at Lodge.—These worthy men have not been wholly unrewarded, in a pecuniary way; but their great reward must arise from their own feelings.

The ship Fame, of Port Glasgow, Hugh Buchanan, Master, was lost in a violent gale of wind, on a large reef of rocks, within a short distance of Balbriggan—a man, his wife, and child, passengers, were unfortunately drowned—the crew after remaining in the rigging, were happily rescued from their perilous situation, though the humane exertions of P. Filgate, Esq. of Louther Lodge.

The Young James, of Liverpool, run on shore near the same place—crew all perished.

There are now three vacancies in the Irish peerage, occasioned by the decease of the Earl of Glandore, Earl of Wicklow, and Lord Callon.

CORK MARKETS NOV. 2.

The fineness of the weather has given occupation to the farmers at home, and to this cause, perhaps, it is to be attributed that the supplies of Grain have not been, for the last few days, so great as they had been. The market seems to be accordingly affected, and wheat of best description brought 30s. very freely all this day. It is from thence down to 24s.

Barley fully maintains its price of 27s and, Oats, for good samples, still bring 18s. but they are in general bought at 16s.

The price of beef has not varied from our last quotations, but pork, of which there is not much in, has advanced considerably, and may now be quoted, at from 22s. to 24s. per cwt. Last quoted price, 20s. to 22s.

MARRIED.

At the Glebe House, Bangor, Major Hartwell, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, nephew to Sir Francis Hartwell, Bart. to Elizabeth, youngest daughter to the late Hamilton Moore Esq. formerly of Moore Hall, Co. Down.

On Thursday last, C. M. Gillicuddy, Esq. to Eliza, daughter of John Curry, of Miltown, Co. Kerry, Esq.

Tuesday morning, by special licence, J. B. Logier, Esq. of Sackville street, Dublin, to Theodosia, eldest daughter of James Maguire, Esq. of Londonderry.

In Dublin, John Bernard, Esq. Surgeon, R. N. to Miss Millikin, of Arran quay.

Morris, son of Thomas Mahon, Esq. of Ballinacree, to Anne, only daughter of the late John Hunt.

DIED

At Greenpark, near Armagh, Wm Cornwallis Hall, Esq. many years Lieut. Colonel of his Majesty's 24th regiment, and late inspecting field officer of yeomanry in the northern districts of Ireland.

At Old Ross, Co. Wexford, Catherine, wife of the Rev. Wm. Napper, Curate of that place.

A few days since, at the Wood, in this county, universally regretted Michael Fitz-Gerald, Esq. a gentleman of the most agreeable manners.

At her father's Maurice Fitzgerald, Esq. Rutland street, deservedly lamented by her relatives and acquaintance, Mrs. Rice, wife of Mr. Michael Rice, of Ballymacree in this county.

On Tuesday, at Carrick-on-Suir, at an advanced age, Mr. Thomas Morris.

On Wednesday last, Mrs. Harding, wife of Henry Harding, Esq. Brigade Major of Yeomanry.

To the Editor of the Limerick Gazette.

SIR—You will be so kind as to inform the gentleman who requested of you to call the attention of the persons who had controul over the Lamp Contractor, in your last publication, that he has not taken the right mode of obtaining his object.—There can be no controul over the contractor when he fulfills his contract; which is the case in the present instance, as the lamps are always lighted within the time limited—and as to having them lighting in the morning at six o'clock, when the Mail Coach is setting out, (though they generally are, and even to a much later period) would be both unreasonable and unnecessary, and would be two hours later than the contract limits. There are no particular streets mentioned to have a priority of lighting, and it is to be presumed that the contractor will give such directions as may suit his own convenience; but when any public object or advantage, is to be derived by an alteration in the system, of course it is to the contractor the application should be made: and it would be very extraordinary indeed were he to refuse what would add to the public safety.
