

cuments which have come into your hands perhaps leave no doubt as to the name of the person to whom I lent it; but it is not my business to make it known. I speak the truth on every point that respects myself personally; I do not think it a duty to do so when it may compromise others.

Q. Was it not you who sent to the hair-dresser a sample of hair, and three measures to make a perruque for Lavalette? A. No, Sir.

Q. Yet the contrary would appear to result from the note which I now show you, as well as the sample, and which were found in your porte-feuille? A. I certainly acknowledge both the sample and the note; but I declare that neither of them have any connexion with M. Lavalette: I affirm that it was a commission which I received about a year ago from a person named Berthold, who was then at Constantinople, and I believe attached to the English embassy. The letter, I believe, will be found in my porte-feuille, which will confirm this declaration.

The above being read over, the prisoner said that his answers contained the truth; that he persisted in them; that he had nothing to change or add to them; and signed with us and the clerk, as well the present examination as the note therein alluded to.

Fourth Interrogatory, Feb. 11.

Q. Do you acknowledge the box which I shew you, sealed with the seal of Prefecture, to belong to you? A. No, Sir.

And immediately we broke the wrapper of paper sealed at its two extremities, one across the box and the other on the cover, and after opening the box, we put the following question.

Q. Do you acknowledge the portfolio and the several papers contained in the box? A. I acknowledge the box, as to the papers, the examination of them alone can inform whether they all belong to me, and whether some are not strange to me.

Then proceeding to the examination of the papers, and being convinced by the nature of most of them, and by their dates, that they could not have any reference, direct or indirect, with the affair on which we were seeking information, we occupied ourselves in making a selection of all those which were foreign to our purpose, and we returned them to the box to be shut up again, being first sealed with our seal, and after making a summary and sufficient description of them, to point out their contents in case it should be thought proper to examine them afterwards.

The said papers consist, 1st, of a collection of divers copies, printed, and in sheets, relative to the affair of Marshal Ney, and of divers other political pamphlets; 2d, of a collection of family letters observations made during travels, and addressed to the Sieur Bruce, from Constantinople, Aleppo, London, Geneva, &c, all dated 1813, 1814, and 1815; these last before the month of July; 3d, of a roll of useless papers and envelop of letters. We also put in the box a little list of agenda in red morocco, and the portfolio which contained a part of the papers, on the fastening of which was written the name of the Sieur Bruce.

We then proceeded to the separation of the other papers, and we formed them into two packets.

The first is composed of nine letters or billets, written in English, which we marked and signed with the Sieur Bruce.

The second consists of fifty-four pieces written in French equally marked and signed by ourselves and the Sieur Bruce.

We lately put under one cover four sealed letters addressed to Mons. the Duke de Galle, to Madame the Countess of Aldborough at Brussels.—The Sieur Bruce declared that he had been desired to convey three of these letters, but he did not know how the letter addressed to the Duke de Galle came among his papers.

We also put under the same cover another letter, unsealed, dated the 10th of October, 1814, written in French, and not signed.

The Sieur Bruce declares that he believes he collects that this letter, addressed to the Princess Staremburg, had been sent to him to be carried to the Princess, in a journey which he had proposed to make to Vienna.

To conclude, the last piece put by us under the said envelop, is a memoir of General Lamarque to the King, dated the 3d of August, 1815—With respect to this last piece, the Sieur Bruce declares that he had never seen it, and that it could not have been among his papers except by mistake.

This being done, we put our seal and that of the Sieur Bruce on each end of the tape, which bound each bundle to the cover just spoken of; then we locked the box, and put on it the seal with a wrapper of paper, on the ends of which we also put our seal and that of M. Bruce.

The minutes having been read, the Sieur Bruce signed them with us and the clerk.

The following District Orders were issued on Thursday, in this city:

LOWER SHANNON DISTRICT ORDERS.

Limerick, April 25.

Major General Barry was not a little astonished yesterday evening in looking into the Limerick Chronicle, to see a letter in it from Colonel Armstrong, Assistant Quarter Master General, in which he has taken upon himself unauthorised by the Major General, to return public thanks to an individual in the district, a privilege which the Major General is sorry to be under the necessity of acquainting the Colonel at his time of life, does not belong to a subordinate Officer:—The Major General trusts, there is not another Officer in the District that would do so. The object he has made choice of as the martyr to his praise, gives the liveliest proof of the Colonel's refined taste and sagacity, in selecting so worthy an example to hold up to the District. The Major General feels it incumbent upon him to submit the Colonel's letter to the Commander of the Forces.

Major General Barry feels extremely concerned, that by the unavoidable reduction that has taken place in the army in Ireland, he has by Brigade Major Boyd, being one of the juniors of his rank, been deprived of his services—his conduct, since he has had the honor to command the Lower Shannon District, has uniformly been such as to give the Major General the most perfect satisfaction, who requests that in resigning the situation he has filled with so much credit to himself, he will accept of his best thanks and his sincerest wishes for his future prosperity and happiness.

By Order,

THOS. T. WOOLDRIDGE,

A. A. Gen.

Captain Pigott, Aid de Camp, is to act as Brigade Major, and the Adjutant of the day is ordered to parade the guards.

The troops in this city are ordered to have field days at Newcastle, on Tuesdays and Fridays, at 8 o'clock in the morning. The hour of relieving guards is altered from 10 to 4 in the afternoon, except on Sundays. The garrison is now composed of the 4th or Queen's Dragoons, commanded by Colonel Shore, Artillery, by Colonel Walker, 16th Infantry, Lieut. Colonel Thomas, 2d bat. 30th, Lieut. Col. Hamilton, C. B. and 93d, Lieut. Col. Creagh, C. B.

Wednesday last, the Tipperary militia were disembodied at Clonmel.

QUACKERY—When it is considered that the horrid sin of murder is frequently the consequence of Quackery, it is surprising it does not restrain the uneducated from daring to administer or order remedies, the power of which, they cannot know; and it is as surprising, that persons of some tolerable education should be such dupes as to take remedies from such ignorant and impudent pretenders—or that the law does not interpose its strong hand to rescue the lives of society from such danger.

A melancholy instance of the baneful effects of quackery, has recently occurred in this city. Some meddling gossip had ordered a poultice to be applied to a swelling, which the vulgar call a Worm. The poultice consisted of the roots of a poisonous hemlock which grows abundantly in this neighbourhood. Part of the roots were thrown into the streets and eaten by four poor children, which was not discovered until the youngest, a fine little girl of four years old, fell on the floor senseless and convulsed, when they were brought to the County Infirmary, where, by proper attention three of them were perfectly restored, and the youngest, who suffered more severely, was so far recovered from convulsions and stupor as to speak, and drink some milk; and may probably have been perfectly restored had she been left to the attention and attendance she would have received in that valuable charity.

Too much praise cannot be given to Archdeacon Maunsell, who not only promptly sought for medical attendance, but humanely and anxiously attended and assisted Dr. Grogan and Surgeon Thwaites in their endeavours to restore these unfortunate children to their distressed parents.

The fashionable circles in London are preparing Fêtes and Routes—and every thing is to be a la Cobourg, in honour of the Royal Nuptials. The princely Bridgeman has not yet been introduced personally into public notice; and as he constantly resides in the Royal Palace, at Brighton; but few even of the nobility have had an opportunity of witnessing the grace of his person and manners, the affability of his demeanour, and the princely dignity of his deportment: no portrait has yet been painted of him, and therefore curiosity is not likely to be gratified until the Nuptial Ceremonies have passed, which are now postponed till the beginning of May. Government is so alive to the interest and curiosity attached to this illustrious Stranger, that the first rate of modellers and Sculptors has been sent down to Brighton by the Secretary of State, to obtain a correct representation of his portrait and figure, for the purpose of being forwarded to the different Courts abroad as well as for the gratification of the British Nation. His mental qualifications, which are said to be of a very superior order, must be left to the Biographers of the day. Mr. Turnerelli has been the artist selected to execute this Bust of Prince de Cobourg. It possesses all the combined grace and energy of the art, both as to fidelity of likeness and power of execution; a finer subject could not have been desired for a model or study. The whole figure and head present a noble and dignified character, which the artist has treated with great spirit and truth. A fine profile could not be imagined; bold but not obtrusive; bespeaking piety with firmness; the features regular, and composed with the utmost complacency and quietude. From the aspect and proportions of the head and figure, it leads one to suppose that the illustrious original may be of an active disposition, and in stature somewhat exceeding six feet. The decorations of his various orders of distinction are suspended from his dress; the tout ensemble of which, in unison with the Bust, are so happily executed, as cannot fail inspiring every British heart with an ardent curiosity and desire to behold the husband of their future Queen. Mr. Bell has obtained by Royal permission, a most correct and admirable Drawing of this Bust—and a fine spirited Print of which will be given on the 1st of May, in the next monthly Number-viz. No. 83 of La Belle Assemblee. It will be executed with spirit and merit, equal to those very fine Portraits, which were given in the three previous numbers, viz. No. 80, Miss O'Neil, of Covent Garden Theatre; No. 81, the Princess Charlotte of Wales; No. 82, Madame Lavalette; all these must now prove the most attractive Prints that ever were published.
