extracts from the Dutch Papers will be found his speech, at the opening of the Sessions of the States Brussels, on the 21st instant. They require no more to declare that the Government cannot subsist.

On the contrary his Majesty has declared that a reduction has been effected in the charges of the administration, and in consequence no augmentation of means, no extraordinary resources will be necessary over them.

the recent fashionable arrivals in this country, we have to announce the names of persons of eminent distinction—no less exchanges than Messrs. Thomas Conolly, James Denis Reardon, the Irishmen who, through their energy and zealous exertions of the present Lord, providentially escaped the snares laid for some time ago in London, by the conspirators who suffered for the crime of High Treason, by counterfeiting the coin of the Realm. These men are natives of Headfort, and the vicinity of Tullamore. A sum of money has been set apart for them which they intend to convert into a future livelihood in their native

DEPENDENCE OF LIMERICK.

Following Notices appeared on the Limerick, published on Wednesday last.

Sheriffs of the City of Limerick.

Designated Freemen and Freeholders of the City of Limerick, request you will call a meeting of the Freemen and Freeholders of said city, on the 31st inst. for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of presenting an Address of Congratulation to the Lord Lieutenant, on his happy recovery from his late severe indisposition; and also, for taking into consideration the propriety of presenting a Memorial to the Government on the subject of the Acting Magistrates of this city to attend and assist for the Registering of Freeholds.—John H. Thomas Roche, William Roche, John T. Russell, M. D. Hughes Russell, William Michael Ryan, William Howley.

the Sheriffs to John Norris Russell, Esq.

sincerely rejoice at the Recovery of the Lord Lieutenant, and must decline calling the Meeting required of you, as the requisition contains other matter.

Freemen and Freeholders of the City of Limerick.

Designated Freemen and Freeholders of the City of Limerick, do (in consequence of the death of the Sheriffs,) request your attendance to a meeting at one o'clock, at the Commercial Hotel, for the purpose of presenting a Requisition to the Lord Lieutenant, on the subject of the Act of Parliament for the better Regulation of the City of Limerick, and for the better Regulation of the City of Limerick, and for the better Regulation of the City of Limerick.

In consequence of the latter notice, a meeting took place yesterday—WILLIAM FITZGIBBON, Esq. Banker, was called to the Chair, and addressed the assembly nearly as follows:

It is a great pleasure to me to receive by the Requisition I have just now read, which convenes us, is the necessity of an appeal to the Legislature to afford us opportunity, of exercising that primary and inalienable privilege of the Constitution, the Elective Franchise, most strangely denied by our City Council, and which we decline to meet in the small sufficient number of members for this purpose. They are justly apprehensive, that these qualifications are not designed to represent the corporate views and interests, otherwise we would experience the same zeal and facility in the extension of the Franchise as we observe in the extension of the Franchise to the Peasantry, an object so obviously and vitally important to our immediate interests, but to the Legislature, as it does the very existence of the Constitution, I may spare myself much or any comment, as you are under the urgent necessity of redress.—In fact, the extension of the constitution could be permitted, and the Peasantry may place us in a situation something circumstance of our family coming forward just now, we have deprived our enemies of the only lame pop they depended on—namely, by dividing the people on the subject of religion; a subject that shall never interfere with our present views. Gentlemen, I feel great pleasure in informing you, that our canvas goes on well; Mr. Tuthill and I have nearly gone through the entire of John's parish, out of which we do expect to poll 400, while the gallant Colonel may expect only two.—Gentlemen, I would strongly recommend to you individually, to double your diligence, and there can be no doubt of our ultimate success.

Counsellor HOWLEY also addressed the meeting at some length—our limits this post will not allow its insertion.

Mr. Tuthill then thanked his fellow citizens for the proofs they had given of their zeal and attachment.

Doctor Russell was moved to the Chair, when the thanks of the Meeting were unanimously given to Mr. Roche for his proper and dignified conduct in the Chair.

HARVEST.—The following information, relative to the harvest in the Co. Cork, addressed to a gentleman of Waterford, by a friend of his, thoroughly conversant in the affairs of agriculture, will be perused with more than common interest. After stating the different places through which he had travelled, four or five days ago, he thus speaks:

“By this route, I passed through a considerable portion of the high grounds and corn parts of this county, in which the tillage chiefly consists of oats and potatoes, and I have the pleasure to inform you, that, considering the uncommon wetness of the season, and the length of time it has so continued, the corn has been got up much better than could have been expected, or even imagined: I met with as bulky crops of oats as I ever saw in my life; the potatoe crops were luxuriant in stalk, and still continued green, notwithstanding the smart frosts which we have had. There is, however, a general complaint, that they are watery, making bad food, and, from the continuance of the wet weather, (as heavy a fall of rain took place last night, October 25, as has occurred during this year,) there is now no hope of improvement in them.—Though I have said, that, considering the season, the corn has been got up better than was to have been expected, yet there of course must have been considerable waste, from the number of shiftings which it must necessarily have undergone, besides what the weather has destroyed. I do not think, that, throughout this county, the wheat crop will average four barrels per statute acre. That grain was subjected this year to various maladies; much of it was shed by high winds, and the quality of the whole (a very few favoured spots excepted) is very bad, and will be unproductive of flour. Yet, on the whole, I do not think that there will be any scarcity, and I should deem the government unwarranted in stopping the distilleries of Ireland, as this measure would completely damp the already too drooping spirits of the agriculturist. There has been a great extent of land sown with potatoes and oats, and the latter are certainly above an average crop.”

ATROCIOUS MURDER.

The following dreadful particulars concerning the murder of the late Mr. Fizzell, of Broad Stairs, in the Co. Wexford, has reached us from a very respectable authority.

On the evening of the 28th, Mr. Fizzell was sitting quietly at his fire side. Whilst his housekeeper was making tea, the room door was suddenly opened, and a man, of very large stature, covered with a white sheet, and his face blackened, walked in—and, advancing towards Mr. Fizzell, without saying one word, fired at him, and wounded him in the arm. Mr. Fizzell immediately fell upon his knees, and implored the assassin to spare his life. Another man, disguised in the same manner, then entered the room, and fired with better effect. Mr. Fizzell being shot through the body, fell upon the ground. Both the murderers then retired from the house to load their muskets; after which, with several of their comrades, they returned, and the whole party fired a volley at the body—for by this time Mr. Fizzell was a corpse. Not satisfied with taking his life, those horrid miscreants so ill treated his remains, that it was almost impossible to recognise a human countenance. They took from the body a watch, which he was in the act of winding when they entered, and also £13 in money, which he had a few moments before received as rent. A man and a boy, who were the only male inhabitants in the house, fled; the former concealed himself in an out house, from which he saw the whole of the above mentioned proceedings, and heard the conversation of the assassins, who remained drinking upwards of an hour in the house after the murder. About two hours afterwards several of Mr. Fizzell's tenants came to the house, and remained there all night, drinking their landlord's liquor in the very room where lay his mutilated remains, without any attempt to pursue the murderers; and they next took the

The following are amongst the latest arrivals at Milton's Hotel—the Right Hon. the Earl O'Neill, Captain and Lady Elizabeth Halliday and family.

We regret to observe, that at a meeting held on the 17th inst. at Boyle, at which Lord Lorton presided, it was found expedient to enter into strong resolutions for the maintenance of the public peace, in consequence of several outrages having been committed, which are specified in the resolutions, such as “nightly meetings, robbing houses of arms, pulling down houses, scattering hay,” &c. &c.; and in consequence of “a spirit of outrage, and insubordination having manifested itself in the parishes of Boyle, Kiltoran, Ardcarra, and Tulla, in the Barony of Boyle, that calls for the utmost exertions and vigilance.”

DIED—In March last, in the parish of Stoneykirk, Scotland, Charles Tod. Since his early youth he never had any fixed place of residence, was never married, had singular antipathies to some persons and things, and rather shunned than courted society. A short time before his death, he requested the grave digger to bury him just at the gate of the church yard, that when he rose at the last day he might get a little before the crowd! He had made some progress in the Latin language in his younger years, but earned his subsistence by manual labour, to which, however, he never engaged himself for any length of time in one place. For some time before his death, he was greatly bowed down with age, having a distinct recollection of the battle of Sheriffmuir, which was fought 104 years ago, and therefore could not be less than 105 years of age. He was the only person of his name in that part of the country, and had out lived all his juvenile acquaintance and contemporaries.

On Sunday, at Castle Connell, Mr. Michael Dundon, a young man of the best character, who bore a tedious illness with christian fortitude.

This day, at his house in the Square, after a tedious illness, which she bore with the true resignation of a christian, Mrs. Lynch, wife of Michael Lynch, Esq.—sincerely lamented by all who knew her.

On the 23d inst. after a long illness, in Portman square, Mrs. Mordaunt, wife of the Rev. Charles Mordaunt, and daughter of the late Sir Phillip Musgrave, Bart. of Eden Hall, in Cumberland.

On Saturday last, at his house in Dorset street, Portman square, Robert Lakin, Esq. brother to the late Dr. Lakin, Dean of Wells, and half brother to the late Right Hon. Wm. Winham.
