

and claret, &c. &c. in a similar manner, but promised to pay the sum he had advanced to the waiter, on account of the landlord, on their return to the Institution. Dr. Delahoyde appeared a convivial pleasant fellow, and complained of injuring his finances by keeping good company. The Doctor said he was the particular friend of the Duke of Kent; he and the Duke, however, had quarrelled, but they were now reconciled, the Duke having made him the most abject apology. He said he knew all the Royal Dukes—they were the greatest set of * * * * in the world—he had to lament the misfortune of their acquaintance—it entirely effected his ruin. The Doctors, on their return to Carlow, contrived, instead of paying witness the sum advanced for the Tavern bills, to borrow some money from him, which they never paid.

On their return, the Hanover Doctor invited Witness to walk in the garden of the Institution—he saw Mrs. Hinds there. One of the Doctors on this occasion remarked, that there was fun in a mad house, as well as in the city. They asked him what he thought of Mrs. Hinds, and had he marked her fine eye, and whether he would wish to be introduced?—would he like to kiss her?—Witness replied he had known enough of insane ladies, and did not wish to be bit by one. At eight o'clock on the evening of the second day (yesterday) the Jury retired, and after they had remained together about two hours, without any apparent likelihood of agreeing, the parties consented to withdraw a Juror at ten o'clock, and thus the case remains undecided.

The remaining facts proved by this witness were not material to the issue between the parties.

This trial occupied the public time for two days—it might have been tried in 4 hours. Perhaps the lack of business in the Hall renders it necessary for counsel to prolong their speeches. On the second day they are entitled to a Refresher. If the business of the courts continue to decline, we should not be surprised to find the trial of an action by the maker of a bill of exchange against the acceptor, in the course of next Term, continue for eight days—8 times 5 is 40 (Cocker.)

On Saturday last three Vessels which had been laden at Ungarvan with Grain and Butter, and lay in the harbour, making preparations for sailing, were entered by a number of people, who declared their determination not to allow the food of the Country, to be taken away at this season of distress and scarcity. To insure the accomplishment of their object they proceeded to dismantle the vessels, and actually succeeded in taking away their sails. Next morning a party of Dragoons who occupied a temporary barrack about a mile distant, entered the town, when the sails were recovered and returned to the several vessels, which, in the course of the day, proceeded on their separate destinations.

Wednesday morning about two o'clock, a fire most alarming in its appearances, broke out in the dwelling house of Mr. R. Connor, in William street, Cork, but owing to the prompt attendance and application of the Gas Company's fire engine, it was happily got under with very little damage.

A wager was last week held by Lieutenant Morgan, of the 12th regt. that a poney, his property, would trot, in two hours, from the Exchange here to the market house in Tuam, a distance of above sixteen Irish miles. The animal performed the task in an hour and 48 minutes, notwithstanding that the weather was very inclement and the road very bad. The poney carried 12 stone and turned back twice in the course of the journey, she having so often exceeded the gait agreed on.—Galway Chronicle.

About nine o'clock, on the night of Saturday last, Mr. Ronayne, Esq. of Ballinud, was returning from Waterford, he was summoned to stop at Killeehan, about two miles distant, and on the shore road. The party consisted of two or three. Mr. Ronayne paid no attention to the demand, and proceeded at a rapid rate. One of the assailants, but without effect, and Mr. R. reached his house in safety. On the same night the house of Thomas Ronayne, near the above place, was robbed, and on Monday evening, a woman was robbed on the Portlaoise road, about two miles distance from Waterford.

The Right Hon. John Vandeleur and the other Members in the Custom House Department, have given to the Lord Mayor for relief of the poor in Limerick.
