

up as an Amphitheatre, by the Pit being reduced to a level, for which it was originally laid down.—Every thing could contribute to the comfort, convenience, and entertainment of the audience, has been studiously attended to, at an expence.—The liberality of the Manager, Mr. COOKE, induced him to reduce the price of admission even less than could or ought to be expected.—It is now five years since the people of Limerick had an opportunity of enjoying this delightful recreation.—In this company, are—Messrs. Cooke, Ker, Brown, Wilson, Avery, J. Cooke, Paddington, Master, and Signoras Seraphina and Nina Ferzi. The great ability those admirable, unequalled Performers, have displayed, renders it unnecessary for us to say any thing as to their particular merits.—The anxiety with which their arrival has been looked for, promises a very efficient support to the Manager, who, we are confident, will not, on his part, be wanting in endeavour, to merit the support of the public.

Nothing can more clearly demonstrate the vast benefit resulting to this city from a Fever Hospital than the above statement, taken from the records of that institution: these records are open to all times for the inspection of the public. In addition to the 132 patients admitted in the month of March, 1817, persons in fever were received into the hospital yesterday: since the 1st January, four hundred and twenty five fever patients have been admitted. Surely it must be unnecessary to point out the fatal consequences that would have ensued, had those patients suffered to remain in their habitations, which would have been the case were it not for this invaluable institution.

The claims for admission are daily increasing; and it is with the utmost difficulty, and at a very heavy expence, that patients already in the hospital are accommodated—but had fever increase in the city, the house and the funds would be wholly inadequate to bear any additional pressure.

The Commemoration of our Blessed Saviour's Passion, this day observed with due solemnity.

ASSIZES.

REDUCTION CASE.—At the Galway Assizes, in the county court, a trial for seduction "Bunter v. Honer," came on before Baron Smith on Saturday the 27th. The plaintiff is father to an interesting young man in a humble life, for the seduction of whom, by the defendant, who is a young man a captain of dragoons, he brought his action against him. The damages sued for by him were laid at £3000. The jury after a full hearing and some deliberation, returned a verdict of £40 damages, and 6d costs.

EACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE—At the same assizes on Tuesday, in the town court, an action for each of promise of marriage came on to be tried before Baron Smith, in which Peter Blake, Esq. a lieutenant in the navy, was plaintiff, and Mrs. Mary Blake, a widow lady was defendant. The damages laid at £5000 and after a statement of the plaintiff and of the defendant's cases and of the examination of witnesses on both sides, the parties agreed to a further hearing, and mutually consented to have the action withdrawn.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.—Wednesday came on to be tried in the county court, before Baron Smith, an action for damages for false imprisonment, in which Mr. John Kean, a shop keeper of Galway, was plaintiff, and William Loddell, of Athenry, Esq. a Magistrate of the county, was defendant. The damages were laid at £1000. Verdict for the plaintiff, £300 and costs.

sing, and presenting to Heaven a testimony of the piety and useful virtues of the Bishop; this testimony is typified by a book held in her uplifted and extended hands, and exhibiting the following inscription from Acts x, 4, :—

Thy prayers and thy alms are come up for a memorial in the sight of God.

At the finish of the top of the pyramid an answer is given to the "memorial" by a celestial crown, surmounted with the words from Matt. xxv, 23, :—

Well done good and faithful servant!

DIMENSIONS.

The height of the entire is 14 feet 3 inches—from the lowest part of the top of the Doric cornice is 3 feet 9 inches—the height of the sarcophagus is 3 feet 3 inches—the height of the figure if standing would be over 5 feet; kneeling as it is upon one knee, its height to the top of the head is 3 feet 5 inches; the entire height, including arms, &c. is 4 feet 7 inches—the breadth of the cornice is 9 feet 4 inches—of the die, 7 feet 10 inches—of the cap of the sarcophagus, 6 feet 5 inches.

The subject of costume appears to have been too much, and too little considered by the fair objects who enhance its value, and by their admirers who oftener do injustice than justice to taste therein. Fashion, usurping the place of judgment, gives the general standard of imitation, whilst selection and discrimination ought to form the rules of style. To a lovely woman, her admirer may fairly say "you mend the jewel by the wearing it," yet with a woman of sense, however beautiful, the true friend in the language of sincerity, ought to direct her choice, and reason on the motive for adopting it.—A graceful form may possess an injudicious mind, and vanity may blind the brightest eyes and exclude those rays of good sense which would teach her that every thing does not become her, but that harmony and accord in form and colour, give transcendence to elegance of appearance, may, even bestow seemliness on mediocrity of figure. Youth and innocence best become simplicity and the tint of the blushing rose; the lily blends well with the violet, and the myrtle with the richer hue of the carnation; smiles and dimples look enchantingly under the wreath of flowers, while the commanding aspect acquires dignity from the tiara or splendid plume; the light and elastic form agrees with the loose robe and buskined ankle, while the prominent bosom, the ivory and well turned arm, the nervous yet highly proportioned limb, forming part of a higher stature, demand the mantle, and well folded drapery of the ancients. Concealment and exposure of attractions form in all the finish of the picture.

A ball was fired into the window of a house in Bridge Street, yesterday morning, at an early hour.—The occupant is Serjeant Keith, of the Limerick City Regt. Staff—he had just retired from the window when it entered.—The perpetrators are not as yet discovered.

One of our readers mentions that, on Monday last, he witnessed a most gratifying scene on the Grand Canal. A fleet of sixteen boats, laden with valuable cargoes of corn, flour, and other provisions, for the Dublin market, passed one of the Locks, in the course of about an hour: the burthen of each boat (drawn by one horse, in general) being about 40 tons, on an average: total, 640 tons: which quantity would employ 640 Scotch drays, or 1280 cars, and an equal number of horses respectively!—So much for the utility and economy of inland navigation.—Freeman's Journal.
